City Council: Not just anyone worthy to occupy Flanders Mansion

By KENDALL KLYM

LIKE JOB applicants trying to impress a hopeful employer, would-be tenants of Flanders Mansion off Hatton Road have learned just how picky the Carmel City Council can be.

Although members voted 5-0 Tuesday to continue considering two of three organizations that wish to lease the historic residence, they also made sure those parties understand the stringent requirements council has set forth.

Having eliminated the idea of a youth hostel, council members are still considering proposals for a cooking school and an educational center headed by CSU-Monterey Bay.

No decision on a final lease agreement will be made until more information is obtained from the two entities.

To accentuate how privileged the chosen lessee will be, the council also voted 5-0 to designate the mansion a local historic building. Flanders is already recognized nationally for its historic significance.

Without notice, long-awaited code-enforcement officer leaves position

■ Carmel-by-the-Sea planning department left high and dry

By KENDALL KLYM

AFTER THREE weeks of code enforcement training with his brand-new employer, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, Brad Wall has literally headed for the hills.

Leaving Carmel high and dry without so much as a two-week notice, the city's short-lived assistant planner/code enforcer unexpectedly terminated his employment Dec 9, and returned to the high-Sierra town of Truckee.

Wall had worked as an intern for Truckee's planning department, which reportedly has offered him a full-time position as an assistant-planner and code enforcement officer.

Carmel school district joins PG in quest for lucrative annexation of Pebble Beach territory

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

IT IS A small finger of land nestled in Pebble Beach, and to most , its invisible boundaries mean nothing and have no value.

But to the Carmel and Pacific Grove school districts, its worth can be measured in financial terms — about $300,000 a year is estimated to be at stake.

This chunk of land — which begins at the ocean roughly between Spyglass Hill and Bird Rock Road and widens out to end roughly at the Botanical Reserve on the north and Rona Road on the south — is under the jurisdiction of the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District. But Pacific Grove wants it, and so does Carmel.

Pacific Grove Unified School District wrote Carmel Unified School District a letter last month saying it supported efforts by residents in this area to transfer out of MPUSD and into PGUSD.

But CUSD school board members, learning of this at their Dec. 12 meeting, say they can serve these students equally as well and will not sit back silently while the annexation happens.

CUSD Superintendent Joe Jaconette told the board members that the district really has no say in the matter, except in voicing its opinion at public hearings.

The process

This wedge of land, which juts out awkwardly from the rest of the MPUSD district to the east, separates the Carmel and Pacific Grove school districts. Under the proposed adjustment, the MPUSD western boundary would more closely parallel the City of Monterey's boundaries.

Although only 15 signatures were needed, a petition

'LEAVE YOUR PROBLEMS OUTSIDE'

■ Community Christmas Dinner at the Fairgrounds to serve about 1,000 people who need a place to go — and a meal

By SUSAN BECK

THE BEST way to fully understand the "spirit of Christmas" is to participate in the annual Community Christmas Dinner held at the Monterey County Fairgrounds on Christmas day.

That's how Rich Hughett learned about the true meaning of the holiday — by volunteering his services six years ago to the Community Holiday Dinner Committee, a group of local businessmen and women who organized the event 11 years ago.

"There is no better time to get involved in the spirit of humanity than at Christmas," said the owner of Richard Hughett & Associates, a Monterey advertising and public relations firm.

"Everyone at the Christmas dinner leaves their problems outside," he noted. "We're all equal. It's truly special and unique."

Serving more than 1,000

Each year about 350 volunteers serve more than 1,000 people from noon to 4:30 p.m. in the Monterey Room at the Monterey County Fairgrounds located at 2004 Fairgrounds Road in Monterey.

The annual feast includes turkey, ham, mashed potatoes, yams, fresh vegetables, stuffing, rolls and pies along with beverages.

There also will be a visit from Santa Claus, music and carolers.

The Monterey County Food Bank and private donations provide most of the food and funding for the occasion, Hughett said. However, this year the committee also was awarded a $1,000 grant from the Community Foundation for Monterey County.

> "It started out for the homeless. But it's for more people now."
> — Rich Hughett, Event organizer

"We have plenty of food," he said. "It's a nice hot meal and you can eat all you want."

From all over

Over the years Hughett has observed that the event attracts more seniors, couples, families and single people from Monterey County and as far away as Los Angeles.

"It started out for the homeless," he said.

"But it's for more people now. Every year more people make it part of their holiday season."

This year there will be a take-out delivery service or van service for anyone without transportation who wishes to attend the dinner.

Preparation for the Community Christmas Dinner begins at 9 a.m. Christmas Eve.

For further information about the event, call Hughett at 373-3720.

Poseidon's harrowing adventures at Naval Postgraduate School

REMEMBER Poseidon?

Sure you do. He was the ancient Greek god of the sea, with the power to cause earthquakes.

HE wore few clothes, sometimes none, but it was de rigueur in his circle at the time. Greek gods did their own thing.

Getting back to the point — in 1994, a Greek student at the Naval Postgraduate School, Leo Maganares, arranged in Greece for a stunning, human-sized bronze statue of Poseidon to be shipped here and donated to the school.

ALL went well at the official presentation and acceptance ceremony that year, and the handsome greenish sculpture was ensconced in a place of honor in the entrance way of King Hall, the school's large auditorium.

Things have gone downhill for Poseidon ever since, however.

IN no particular order, the following humiliating incidents befell the god of the sea:

1) A member of a local Rotary Club complained to school officials that the au naturel statue was indecent.

2) Vandals (presumably high school lads, or possibly Lorena Bobbitt) cut or knocked his hallmark off!

3) The school removed Poseidon from his place of honor to an obscure, non-public spot in the Aeronautical Engineering Building where he remains today — virtually hidden, according to Terrible Teri, the astounding detective.

THERE is one upside to Poseidon's whole miserable adventure — somewhere along the way, his cachet was reattached, and echoing the immortal words of John Wayne Bobbitt, he was heard to exclaim:

"Eureka, I have found it!"

OR was it Archimedes who said that on an entirely different matter? I get the two mixed up.

At any rate, according to Terrible Teri, the Poseidon affair is not something the NPS likes to talk about. Neither does Rotary.

WILL the school continue its ignominious banishment of the ancient Greek god forever? (Make that the ancient Greek god Poseidon.)

If so, aren't they risking an international incident?

FURTHERMORE — and I hate to bring this up — do we really want to insult the god who may still hold the earthquake franchise for Earth? The god who made it possible for Richter to work for scale?

These questions cry out for answers.

TODAY'S QUOTE . . . The redoubtable Herb Caen quoting Jerry Matters on a current odious fad:

"A pretty girl smoking a cigar is like a rose dipped in mustard."

THESE FOOLISH THINGS . . . Last Thursday around 2 p.m., Monterey's Leo McIntyre was puzzled to see an empty, light tan car, with its trunk door raised, sitting on the corner of Del Monte and Canyon Del Rey in Seaside.

It was blocking the crosswalks at the corner there (kitty-corner from Embassy Suites Hotel), and nobody was around it.

ON the side window was a car dealer's sticker saying, "For Sale. As Is. No Guarantee."

But you could have knocked old McIntyre over with a feather when he looked more closely and discovered it was — a 1991 ROLLS-ROYCE!

WHAT do you suppose was the story on the whole thing? Where was the driver, and what had happened? Well, how about this:

Seaside's Auto Center is just up the street, and perhaps a prospective buyer was taking the Rolls out for a test drive when it suddenly conked out!

THE thoroughly steamed driver opened up the trunk lid as a sign that the thing was hors de combat, then hopped on a bus and went home!

And maybe not.

NO? OK, what is YOUR scenario?

Carmel's David Dilworth leads legal fight against Cañada Woods project

By KENDALL KLYM

A CARMEL-BASED environmentalist has taken the lead in challenging the Monterey County Board of Supervisors decision Tuesday to approve Clint Eastwood's Cañada Woods North development project.

As of Pine Cone press time Wednesday afternoon, David Dilworth was the only opponent of the project who had announced intentions to take legal action against the supervisors' decision.

Dilworth said he plans to sue for what he considers a violation of state environmental law and a violation of his right to free speech at a public meeting.

He claims the board violated the California Environmental Quality Act when it failed to disclose the type and amount of pesticides that would be used on the property, a 1,060 acre stretch of hillside located south of Highway 68 and north of Carmel Valley Road.

"CEQA demands that information," Dilworth said, noting that he conducts workshops on the logistics of the environmental act and how it relates to environmental impact

After three hours of deliberation and public comment, the council was insistent that applicants who wish to be considered must:

■ Have a secure source of revenue to operate and improve the building.

Councilman Bob Fischer said promised grant funding, as in the case of a joint proposal from CSUMB and the Institute for Innovative Learning for a library, museum and cultural "gathering place" will not suffice.

"We need to see the money up front," Fischer said.

Although one of the applicants, Hosteling International, submitted an elaborate financial plan to renovate and upgrade the house, which would become a youth hostel, the council dismissed the plan because of the city's strict codes against placing "hotel" rooms in residential zones.

The estimated cost of renovating the mansion, which is "falling apart," according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar, is $500,000. City officials have stated the city doesn't have the money in its own coffers to fix up the residence.

■ Enhance the quality of life for residents.

How to do that was a matter of opinion. Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac and Councilman Fischer said they favor a proposal for a culinary arts center that would offer cooking classes taught by master chefs.

Meanwhile, Councilman Marshall Hydorn favors selling the building that houses the children's library and moving the library to the mansion. All agreed that whatever way they decide to go they should adhere to the village's commitment to serve residents in a way that is consistent with the city's high quality of life.

"It seems that the Flanders mansion could best be used for public use," Hydorn said.

In their action, members agreed to consider the cooking school proposal only after institute representatives agreed on a nonprofit status.

■ Maintain the residential character of the neighborhood.

ues, said she thought the CSUMB joint project would fit the needs of the city without disturbing the village character.

Placing herself in the shoes of residents, Hazdovac agreed that neighborhood quality is of the utmost importance.

In response to the comments of neighbors who protested all lease proposals and advocated the sale of the property, Hazdovac said, "I don't blame the neighbors. If I lived there, I might want the city to sell it, too."

However, she said, a compromise was the best the city could do to serve the needs of neighbors as well as the city, which must receive some financial gain from the property.

"I think the lightest use is the culinary institute," she said. "It's the best use and of the greatest return to the city."

While the council's decision to consider lease proposals was a blow to residents who adamantly urged the city to sell the property as a single-family residence to prevent the neighborhood from turning into a noisy commercial district, the future of the Flanders mansion continues to remain unsettled.

Representatives from CSUMB and the Institute for Innovative learning, as well as those from the proposed Carmel Center for Culinary Arts, have a time limit of six months to work with the city to develop a proposal that meets the council's requirements.

"Carmel has been known as a center for the arts, and the area of culinary arts has not been addressed in this city," said Bill Fleming, a representative of the proposed culinary arts institute. "We believe our proposition is the best recipe for developing a center that benefits the community and remains mindful of the neighbors' needs."

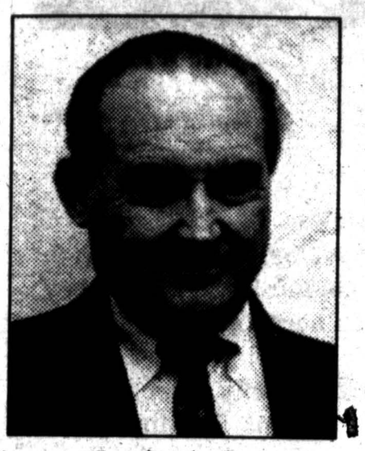
City commissions receive facelift with appointments of seven new members

Orientation program designed to educate members about city, staff

By KENDALL KLYM

IN TOPICS ranging from culture to community planning, Carmel can expect different perspectives in 1997 as new faces fill empty posts at five of the city's advisory bodies.



Frank Wasko

The Carmel City Council approved last week Mayor Ken White's appointments of the following people to the following bodies:

■ Carmel Community and Cultural Commission
— Carolyn Hardy
— Denny Gambill

■ Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees
— Robert Irvine

■ Carmel Historic Preservation Committee
— Basil Allaire

■ Carmel Planning Commission
— Robin Wilson
— Frank Wasko

■ Carmel Recreation Commission
— Laurel Whorf.

The council also authorized the expenditure of up to $700 for the preparation of manuals for each new member to read as part of a newly created orientation program.

Councilwoman Barbara Livingston said in a separate interview that the program will educate appointees to government language and codes they will encounter regularly.

"It will give people new insights into the process of what responsibilities they have to the city, to each other and to the staff," Livingston said.

Appointees' impressions

Already anticipating how they wish to serve, some of the new appointees have begun to stake out personal goals.

Hardy has placed growth of the city's cultural offerings high on her list; however, not at the expense of residential needs and values.

"One of the things I'm aware of as a resident is the presence of our theaters," Hardy said, noting that the renovation of the Sunset Center will impact area residents.

Hardy said she envisioned "growth and enhancement" of the city's theaters, but not without addressing issues of traffic, noise and parking.

Hardy is the past president of the Junior League of Monterey County and has served as the treasurer of the local chapter of the United Way.

Irvine said he would like the city to find a means within its tight budget to hire a full-time children's librarian.

"I don't know if the funds are available," Irvine said. "But I'd like to see someone working with children full time."

APPOINTMENTS: Mystery writer Irvine named as new library trustee

He said he is well aware of the budgetary problems that led to cutbacks at the library but remains hopeful in light of recently increased library hours.

Irvine is a successful mystery writer whose books may be checked out at the Harrison Memorial Library.

Wasko, an investment adviser with a penchant for following guidelines, said he plans to offer the planning commission a "moderate" outlook based on following the city's general plan.

"I hope to be a moderate force on the commission and look at both sides," Wasko said. "Although people think I'm a tree hugger (having served as president of the Carmel Open Space Task Force), I'm a property rights Republican."

Council's views

Both Wasko and Wilson will have to work extra hard to prove themselves as planning commissioners, for they were the only appointees who did not receive unanimous support from the council.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, the only council member to vote against the two, said neither has a formal background in planning, architecture or construction.

"This means we're going to have a seven-member body with no trade knowledge in construction or architecture," Hazdovac said.

Wilson, the former president of California State University, Chico, said he simply hopes "to survive" as a planning commissioner.

Livingston said she thinks the two men are suited perfectly for their posts.

"What I understand is the value of being a commissioner lies in a commissioner's being a lay person," Livingston said. "We have a staff that is professional, and we rely on its expertise."

Both Livingston and Hazdovac said they were pleased with the other appointments.

Suicide Prevention Center earns grant

THE SUICIDE Prevention & Crisis Center has recently received a $12,000 grant from the Grover Hermann Foundation Fund of Community Foundation for Monterey County.

The grant will be used toward the expenses of a merger with the Suicide Prevention Service of Santa Cruz County, a program of Family Service Association of Santa Cruz, to create a new tri-county agency.

The purpose of a tri-county agency is a joint endeavor to better serve the residents of the Central Coast with expansion of crisis line hours, new multilingual access to crisis line volunteers with the use of on-line translation services, expansion of the survivors of sudden death program and increased outreach to populations at high risk for suicide, including youth and seniors.

Outstanding women nominees sought

THE COMMISSION on the Status of Women is currently seeking nominations for its Outstanding Women of Monterey County awards.

Those interested in submitting a nomination may visit the commission's office at 1000 S. Main St., Salinas, or call 755-4499.

The awards, which will honor women from all walks of life, will be presented at a ceremony in Monterey on March 9, 1997.

DMV hits information superhighway

THE CALIFORNIA Department of Motor Vehicles is taking the first steps toward using the internet for customer service by making forms, handbooks and other information available at its site on the worldwide web.

Currently the DMV web site at http://www.ca.gov/dmv has four of its most requested forms available for downloading: the Change of Address form, Bill of Sale, Release of Liability and a request for insurance information. These forms can be mailed to the DMV for processing, reducing the need to visit a DMV office.

The driver handbook vehicle code and a selection of "Fast Facts" information sheets can also be reviewed or printed out on-line.

Bookstores launch literacy program

THE MONTEREY Bay Independent Booksellers are joining together in support of the local chapter of Reading is Fundamental (RIF), an international literacy program that brings new books to children on the Monterey Peninsula.

Holiday "Gift Trees" are being placed in several local independent bookstores decorated with ornaments containing the names and grades of the local children in this project.

Customers will be encouraged to buy an age appropriate book or to donate $5 for the purchase of an appropriate book. RIF volunteers will be reading stories at three local schools, and giving the books to the children.

Participating stores include: Thunderbird Bookstore at the mouth of the valley in Carmel; Pilgrim's Way in downtown Carmel; Bay Books in downtown Monterey; and Bookworks, Mulberry and Bookmark, all in Pacific Grove.

Prostate cancer research bill introduced

STATE SEN. BRUCE McPherson (R-Santa Cruz), along with U.S. Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-California), recently introduced the Prostate Cancer Research Act of 1997, SB 77.

This marks the third time supporters are trying to establish a state-funded research program similar to the one the state runs for breast cancer.

"The cost in mens' lives is equally outrageous," said McPherson, who defeated Rusty Areais in a close Nov. 5 election. "More new treatments and diagnostic tools are needed. As a nation, nearly 320,000 new cases are diagnosed annually."

Both senators said the research program also will boost California's biotechnology industry as well as the economy.

Act fast to cut your '96 taxes

WITH THE END of the year fast approaching, time is running out for taking actions that will cut your 1996 tax bill. Here is a quick reminder checklist of tax-cutting steps you should still consider:

■ Estimate your income and deductions for both 1996 and 1997. Then, to minimize your total tax for both years, consider shifting income and/or deductions between the two years.

■ If you're self-employed, set up a Keogh plan before Dec. 31. You can then make a deductible 1996 contribution as late as the filing deadline, including extensions, for your 1996 tax return.

■ To squeeze in more tax deductible expenses for 1996, pay state and local taxes, property taxes, interest due and accelerate charitable deductions before year-end. If you don't have the cash, consider paying with a credit card in order to get the deduction this year while paying the bill next year.

■ Use the $17,500 expensing deduction for the purchase of business equipment.

■ Review your investment portfolio and estimate capital gains you've already taken. Consider selling some losers before the end of the year to offset those gains taken plus an additional $3,000, which can offset ordinary income.

■ Before investing in any mutual funds, check whether the fund will be making a year-end distribution that will increase your 1996 tax bill.

■ If you're planning a wedding or in the midst of divorce proceedings before year-end, remember that it's your marital status as of Dec. 31 that determines your tax status for the entire year. Find out if rescheduling the event could save you significant tax dollars.

■ More people get hit these days by the alternative minimum tax (AMT). So if you have large deductions or tax preferences, be sure to do an AMT estimate. You may want to adjust your other strategies if the AMT is going to apply to you.

■ Make sure you have paid in enough through tax withholding and quarterly estimated payments to avoid penalties when you file in April.

✓ Refund opportunities in the new '96 tax legislation

Good news! By allowing taxpayers to benefit retroactively from tax law changes, the Small Business Act, passed in August, creates refund opportunities for certain companies and employees.

For example, the previous tax law allowed an exclusion of up to $5,250 from the gross income of workers who received educational assistance benefits, but that provision lapsed at the end of 1994.

As a result, some employers began treating educational assistance payments as wages, and they withheld social security (FICA) and other taxes on the benefits. The 1996 tax law reinstates the educational assistance exclusion and allows taxpayers to apply it retroactively.

So, if your company treated educational assistance payments as wages in '95 and '96, you (and your company) may be entitled to a refund.

If you cash in U.S. savings bonds to pay for qualified college expenses, the tax law allows you to exclude bond interest from your taxable income. The previous tax law contained an exception: If your adjusted gross income exceeded $40,000 (or $60,000 on joint returns), adjusted for inflation, the interest exclusion began to phase out.

However, due to a mix-up in a '93 tax law, these thresholds were set too low for years following '92. As a result, taxpayers who lost all or part of their interest exclusion for years after '92 may want to recompute their taxes for those years to see if they're entitled to a refund.

The new tax law also retroactively affects invalid S corporation elections, involuntary conversions of business or investment property, FICA taxes paid on employee tip income, and a few other business transactions.

ANNEXATION

with roughly 32 signatures from some 60 registered voters who live in the disputed area was recently turned into the Monterey County Superintendent of Schools.

If the county superintendent approves the petition, it will be forwarded to the Monterey County Board of Education. The board will hold two public hearings on the matter — one in Pacific Grove and one in Monterey — to help it decide whether to approve the boundary change or put it before voters in the Monterey and Pacific Grove school districts.

Sharing the wealth

Despite Carmel and Pacific Grove school districts both claiming the issue is not about money, any addition to either district territory would mean more money for that district, since both districts are "Basic Aid" districts (MPUSD is not) and receive their funding from property taxes.

CUSD's annual budget exceeds $16 million while PGUSD's is around $11 million.

Blakely wrote that the boundary change is based "strictly on what is in the best interest of the education needs of students" in the area because PGUSD schools are closer to those homes than Monterey schools.

"The discussion really isn't taking place around the value of the dollars," CUSD Superintendent Joe Jaconette agreed in an interview this week. "It's really about service to the students and which district would be able to provide service to them."

Don't see eye-to-eye

In his letter and in an interview this week, Blakely confirmed that CUSD really has no role in the boundary change process and that PGUSD was being amiable in notifying them.

"As you can see ... the transfer that is being proposed has no impact on (CUSD) and there will be no necessity for any action or reaction by your district ..." he wrote.

But CUSD board members disagreed.

"I personally have objections to them annexing that territory," said board member Dan Hightower. "Granted, they took the first step (with MPUSD), but it could just as easily be in our district. I think Carmel could serve those students just as well."

Board members Patricia Condren and Gary Gray agreed.

"I'm right with you," Condren told Hightower.

My roommate was depressed. More than the blues. I mean seriously depressed.

She always looked sad. Cried a lot. She couldn't sleep, eat, or do any of her work.

Treat it! Defeat it!

Most of the time she wouldn't talk to me. I just couldn't reach her.

I figured she needed to get professional help, before her pain got worse. So I checked it out.

I was amazed. Once her depression was diagnosed, treatment was effective and began to work within a few weeks.

Gray said he believed PGUSD had "taken the high road" by notifying CUSD. Still, he believes CUSD could serve the students equally well.

"I don't want to get into any open warfare over territory with the Pacific Grove School District," he said, adding that he didn't want CUSD to be viewed as "greedy" or as an "expansionist monster."

He suggested a diplomatic resolution was possible.

"It doesn't have to be all or none," he said. "Maybe the way would be to share if a change is made, but I'm not entirely sure there will be a change and that Monterey (school district) has bought into it."

He said the district should take a position: "For us to sit back and say; 'Pacific Grove do what you will' —well I'm utterly uncomfortable with that."

Hightower suggested CUSD wait to see MPUSD's position on the matter.

The CUSD board plans to further discuss this topic at their next meeting on Thursday, Jan. 9, 1997.

CODE-ENFORCEMENT

Meanwhile, Carmel's planning department must venture out again to recruit another qualified officer who is able to lay down the law when it comes to zoning enforcement.

Carmel's senior planner, Brian Roseth, said he was surprised at Wall's sudden desertion and was not aware of his other offer.

"He just called in and said he was not coming," Roseth said. "We have to deal with picking up the pieces now."

Because of Wall's decision, Roseth said, Carmel must do the following:

■ Advertise for the position again in trade publications.

Roseth said he hopes advertisements will have generated enough applications by January.

■ Screen applications.

The city has given itself between Feb. 1 and Feb. 15 to complete this process.

■ Conduct interviews.

Applicants are scheduled to be interviewed between Feb. 15 and Feb. 28.

■ Hire and train the chosen applicant.

Training takes three weeks to complete.

Roseth said the planning department staff has decided to forego the original pool of applicants because it is "too old," and runner-ups did not meet qualifications.

Meanwhile, the city must hold off on a newly designed program to educate business people and homeowners about city codes. During the past year, Carmelites have broken a wide array of codes some of which are less obvious than others. From distributing free samples of food outside their businesses and installing illegal signs and displays to erecting a storage shed behind a restaurant, local citizens have repeatedly broken zoning codes, according to planning department officials.

Brian Roseth

Carmel mayor Ken White said he was especially disappointed that the city will have to wait at least three months to alleviate such problems, which occur city-wide.

"The old days of giving two weeks' notice are obviously gone," White said in reference to Wall's sudden termination of his employment without explanation. "I'm very, very disappointed and very upset. The city council has taken a strong position on getting a code enforcer."

White said the city would pursue another applicant until the title is filled.

"We won't quit until it's done," he said.

COMMUNITY HOSPITAL TO ACQUIRE HOSPICE

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

COMMUNITY HOSPITAL of the Monterey Peninsula is poised to acquire Hospice of the Central Coast, the Times has learned.

While no details have been finalized, the two nonprofits are engaging in talks that are expected to lead to a consolidation of services to help each other survive in the new era of "managed care."

Both sides have signed a letter of intent to this effect, according to a Dec. 6 memo distributed to CHOMP staff and board members.

"The letter of intent, while not a binding agreement, is a meaningful step in the process of evaluating the benefits of integration," Jay Hudson, CHOMP president and CEO wrote in the memo.

"At this point, we only have an agreement to talk," said Susan Freeland, Hospice executive director, noting that the organization is unsure what effect managed care will have, but wants to ensure it does not hurt the nonprofit's mission to serve the terminally ill.

While CHOMP would take over ownership of Hospice, its operations, located in Hollister, Salinas and Monterey (100 Barnet Segal Lane) would retain their own identities.

Managed care

By integrating with CHOMP, Hospice would be able to provide service to its patients who are covered by insurance companies which have adopted the "managed care" approach to coverage, explained Freeland.

In other words, "managed care" insurance carriers would not provide coverage to hospice patients unless the hospice services fell under the wing of a larger institution, such as CHOMP.

"If we are not connected somehow, by some arrangement with a larger provider (such as CHOMP), we run the risk of being a wonderful hospice program, but our patients will have no way to access our service," said Freeland.

"They just want to make sure Hospice is available for their patients and are looking at ways to survive," agreed CHOMP president Jay Hudson in an interview this week.

As more insurance companies begin providing managed care, moves such as this one are becoming a trend in the health care industry, as smaller organizations like Hospice join forces with larger institutions to ensure their patients have access to their services.

"We're intensely interested in maintaining our level of service and maintaining the quality of care we're known for," said Freeland.

"If you look around, everyone in health care is looking for ways to maintain their levels of service. Really, all we're doing here is looking to the future."

Larger institutions, such as CHOMP, benefit by fitting that the column should at least have a semblance of Yuletide flavor today, so we offer the following personal vignette in keeping with the spirit of the season:

"Give me some hints," Crescendo said to me last weekend, "on what you'd like for your BIG present this year."

"FUNNY you should ask," I replied, beaming, "for I was thinking about that just yesterday."

I told her I had two top-heavy favorites from the wonderful things I had seen advertised, but I was unable to choose between them because I was mentally torn asunder by overwhelming desires for the two:

1- The Chia Pet!

2- The Smart Clapper!

Or perhaps:

1- The Smart Clapper!

2- The Chia Pet!

Those two, to me, are the pick of the litter this year!

P.S. — A distant third was Tickle Me Elmo, but it lacks the prestige of the other two. Besides, it neither grows hair nor turns off the TV.

SPEAKING of the spirit of the season, Geraldine Mills of Monterey nominates big-hearted Bank of America for this year's Christmas Sensitivity Award!

("Dashing through the snow ...")

Last weekend, sentimental old B of A — full of good cheer — announced it was eliminating the jobs of 3,700 employees!

IT'S a "reorganization," said a bank press release, "designed to boost profits." And to make spirits bright this time of year.

("In a one-horse open sleigh ...")

And lordy, they certainly NEED a boost in profits! The giant bank only earned an all-time record $2.1 billion in the first nine months of this year, and its stock has shot up by more than 50 percent!

("O'er the fields we go ...")

IN view of this, the B of A's CEO, David Coulter, was asked how come this huge downsizing then?

"It is better to take such action (throwing employees out of work) when the company is performing well," he explained. (Actually, B of A has shown it feels ANY time is a good time to downsize!)

("Laughing all the way!")

Notice that this downsizing thing is not being done for the benefit of the bank's CUSTOMERS, but entirely for the windfall monetary benefit of its EXECUTIVES and STOCKHOLDERS.

AS Donald Robert Perry Marquis wrote in the 1930s:

"Each generation wastes a little more of the future with greed and the lust for riches."

("We wish you a Merry ...")

ONWARD . . . Stonepine Resort in Carmel Valley has received a "Purple Shield" award from Relais & Chateaux, an international association headquartered in Paris.

(Uh-oh, Paris? The City of Carmel may wish to caution Stonepine to beware of Parisians bearing awards!)

STONEPINE is not worried, though, for it knows the organization, which consists of owners of independent hotel chateaus, abbeys, manor houses, mills and fine country houses.

The "Purple Shield" is the group's highest accolade and doesn't cost the recipient a cent. (Can you hear Carmel sobbing in the background?)

OWNED by Gordon and Noel Hentschel, the 330-acre "estate resort" of Stonepine is the ONLY facility in the U.S. to be designated a "Purple Shield" operation — the other 16 being located in Europe.

A mystery to most Peninsula residents, Stonepine is a swank, limited capacity facility one mile beyond Carmel Valley Village, with guest accommodations consisting of 12 suites, a cottage and a gate house.

IT is currently offering two-night "French Country Christmas" packages (Dec. 24 to 26) for $950 per couple.

Good old Daniel Barduzzi is general manager.

LASTLY . . . It's that time of year, all right. Notice that it's the SHOPPING days that are counted down, not the number of days until the birthday of Jesus. But you can't fight the system.

Go ahead and shop 'til you drop, pay 'til you bray, and drink 'til you stink! It's the American way of paying homage.

ALL together now, "It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas ..."

reports. "The board refused to tell us what pesticides will be used."

Dilworth criticized the board's public comment procedure in which those who wish to comment must sign a paper at the beginning of each meeting.

He said he signed the paper at Tuesday's meeting but was denied the right to speak.

"This is an outrageous procedure," he said. "The board makes such an effort to stop information from being brought to public record."

Supervisor Edith Johnsen, whom Dilworth claims prevented him from having his say by "shouting him down," was unavailable for comment.

having smaller organizations under their umbrella because this increases their patient base and services.

As a result of this consolidation, all the organizations involved become more attractive to insurance carriers, making it more likely the carriers will provide coverage.

Hudson said there is also potential cost savings.

Two organizations

"Hopefully, through the efficiency of combining two organizations, we would possibly save money and do better by operating two organizations under one wing," said Hudson. "Since the two are nonprofit organizations, it seems to be a good fit."

Although details of an integration have not been worked out, Hudson wrote in his Dec. 6 memo that the integration would make Hospice's program a department of CHOMP and integrate the home care programs into the hospital's home health program.

"Community Hospital plans no other immediate changes in the service, operations or staffing of the hospice program," he wrote.

But most importantly, said Freeland, Hospice would keep its own identity and would keep a separate foundation to raise money for its services.

Hospice would not receive financial support from CHOMP and would still rely on donations.

"If our donors think all of a sudden we're part of Community Hospital and don't need their donations anymore, it could be devastating for us," she said.

Hospice will also pay CHOMP to cover the costs of running Hospice programs.

"The foundation would retain, manage and disperse all the funds previously donated to Hospice and all new funds raised by the foundation," wrote Hudson in his Dec. 6 memo. "The Hospice Foundation will continue fund raising activities on behalf of the Hospice program to ensure its continuation, providing a specified portion of its investment income annually to the hospital for that purpose."

Hudson said discussions between the two organizations could take up to three months, and details of a formal agreement will be issued by a joint announcement when it is completed.

Carmel Invitational tips off today; host Padres set to play N. Tahoe at 8 p.m.

Nick Cardinale's basket at buzzer shoots down Condors, 62-60

By PATRICK FOUDY
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

IF MOMENTUM counts for anything, then perhaps Nick Cardinale's winning bucket at the buzzer Tuesday night will give Carmel High a big lift heading into the opening round of today's Carmel Invitational.

The Padres, who play the fourth and final game at 8 tonight, saw their record rise to 2-4 with Cardinale's dramatic hoop as the buzzer sounded, giving Carmel a 62-60 win over visiting North Monterey County High.

Cardinale, who has been a solid force all season for Carmel, scored a game-high 22 points as the senior forward-guard helped spoil Gary Greeno's return to the CHS gymnasium.

Greeno, last season's head coach at Carmel High, left after one season to take a teaching position at North County, where he also guides the boys varsity team. Greeno's Castroville-based Condors fell to 2-5.

Senior forward Ben Cook chipped in with 14 points, while sophomore forward Jud Richards added 12.

Robert Louis Stevenson girls' varsity soccer player Tanja Roos (23) battles for the ball in last Thursday afternoon's Mission Trail Athletic League game against Santa Catalina in Pebble Beach. Stevenson's Jobbie Gaskin (24) is behind Roos. Visiting Catalina went on to win the contest, 9-1. Both the RLS and Carmel High girls are in action today as the Pirates host Alvarez, while the Padres entertain Pacific Grove. Both MTAL games begin at 3 p.m.

Commissioner: Realignment solid solution

Padres, Pirates will no longer have to tackle football power Palma

By SCOTT A. BROWN

NOW THAT the realignment of the Mission Trail Athletic League and Monterey Bay League is official, Elgie Bellizio, commissioner of both leagues, admits that it was an issue where not all parties were going to be 100 percent satisfied.

But he's certainly not disappointed with the end result, which, most notably for Carmel High and Robert Louis Stevenson, shifts perennial football powerhouse Palma High to the Monterey Bay League.

"We realized we'd never get an ideal scenario for all concerned," said Bellizio. "But I believe this is as close to utopia as we can get."

Board gives OK

To address the addition of three high schools opening in South County in 1998, a significant realignment of the MTAL and MBL was approved by the Central Coast Section Southern Conference Board of Governors Dec. 11 during a meeting held at Palma High.

The realignment, which will take effect at the beginning of the 1998-99 school year, causes CHS and RLS to lose longtime rivals Palma and Alisal as well as Alvarez, which just completed its first full season in the MTAL.

But the two local schools will gain Seaside High as a new rival in the MTAL.

The format represents the closest approximation in 12 years to a much-discussed Peninsula athletic league.

The reshuffling was approved by the board by a 16-2 vote, with one abstention. Alisal and North Monterey County, which cast the two "no" votes, will appeal to the CCS for instatement in the new MTAL.

"The CCS has been entertaining realignment proposals within our conference on odd-numbered years for the past 12 years," Bellizio said. "This cycle is of great importance to us now with the addition of the three schools (Greenfield, Anzar, Soledad). If they were simply to go into the MTAL as it was before (realignment), we would have 13 teams for girls' sports. That would mean no practice games."

A subcommittee of the CCS, headed by Monterey High School Principal Larry Snyder, initially proposed that the MTAL and the MBL be configured into two divisions each — MBL North and South, and MTAL South Valley and Peninsula. The original format, which was put forth in a proposal in late October, would have had Anzar participating in the MBL North.

No divisions

The final format, however, was the result of suggestions implemented during a league presidents' meeting Nov. 13. This ratified version has the MBL, minus Anzar, playing as one league with no divisions. The league will include Gilroy, Live Oak, North Salinas, Salinas, Hollister, Alisal, Alvarez, North Monterey County, Palma, Notre Dame and Monterey.

Conversely, the MTAL receives Anzar and will split into Valley and Peninsula divisions. The Peninsula division includes natural geographic rivals Carmel, RLS, Pacific Grove, Santa Catalina, Seaside and York. The Valley division includes Anzar, Gonzales and its future subdivision school, Soledad; and King City and its future subdivision school, Greenfield.

No format has been determined as yet for the structure of inter-league competition. Presumably, MTAL teams in all sports, with the exception of football, would play a double round-robin schedule against the schools in their division, and one game against each of the other non-divisional squads within the same league.

MBL football teams would conceivably play nine league games preceded by one preseason game. Because Anzar will not field a football squad, MTAL teams would play seven league games preceded by three preseason games. Divisional records would be determined by comparing the league record of the teams in each division against all other teams in the league.

Realignment: What they're saying

By SCOTT A. BROWN

HERE IS what some of the more prominent prep sports figures on the Peninsula have to say about the league realignment:

■ Mike Kelly, varsity football and baseball head coach, Carmel High School:

"Football-wise, teams seem in line with one another...But the only team in the current MTAL with any respect is Palma, and if you take them out then we become a 'C' league.

"In terms of baseball, Carmel and Pacific Grove have won our league all but three times over the last 26 years. Now we're both in the same 'C' league because we have weaker football programs, and only one of us goes to the (Central Coast Section) playoffs."

■ Jeff Young, athletic director and varsity football head coach, Robert Louis Stevenson High School:

"I feel school size is the great equalizer, so I think this has been accomplished with us playing like-size schools. But then Palma would argue that it's a small school and shouldn't get switched. I just think it's an honor Palma has proven it can play at the next level.

"You can't fool kids. We can preach about winning all we want, but the kids know

Rio Resolution Run primed for seventh renewal on Jan. 1

■ The deadline to preregister for event is Friday.

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

IF YOU'RE like the 1,000 or so runners who plan to get the New Year off to a running start, then Friday's deadline to preregister for the Rio Resolution Run should be of importance.

Entries for the seventh annual run, scheduled for 9 a.m. on New Year's Day in Carmel, must be postmarked by Friday, according to event organizers. The entry fee is $20, whether runners plan to tackle the "long course" — 6.8 miles — or participate in the "Family Fun Run," carried out over 3 miles.

Again, the race features the popular Centipede division, with the stipulation that six runners be in costume and connected in some way.

Both the 6.8-mile run and 3-mile run begin at the Rio Grill restaurant in the Carmel Crossroads and end at Larson Field, just east of Carmel Mission Basilica. Before settling back at the Mission, the long course takes runners along Scenic Drive and Carmel River State Beach.

Proceeds from the event benefit the Suicide Prevention and Crisis Center. Due to budget cutbacks last year, race organizers said the center had to close its office for two weeks and reroute calls to the executive director's home to maintain service.

Although preregistration entries must be postmarked by Friday, race-day registration also will be available for $25 from 7:30 to 8:40 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 1. The event is limited to the first 1,000 runners.

All registrants receive brunch, provided by Rio Grill, and a long sleeve T-shirt. Prizes will be awarded to the top finishers in the long course run, while an opportunity drawing will be held after the race and all entrants in attendance are eligible to win.

To preregister, runners should send their entry form (with the waiver signed), a $20 check and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Rio Resolution Run, c/o Donna Little, 555 Rolling Hills Lane, Danville, CA 94526.

Entry forms can be obtained at two locations in the Crossroads: Rio Grill restaurant and The Treadmill.

Race hotline/more information: 644-2427.

RLS snaps losing streak, hosts Condors tonight

By ABRAM TROSKY
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

THE ROBERT Louis Stevenson boys varsity basketball team will play its last preseason home game at 7 tonight against North Monterey County prior to traveling to San Bernardino for a tournament there beginning the day after Christmas.

"It'll be a great way to get ready for league; a time to assess where we're at and improve on some things," said RLS head coach Bill Hankison of the four games his squad will play in Southern California.

During last year's Christmas break, RLS traveled to Las Vegas for the Holiday Prep Classic, a larger scale tournament that attracted 56 teams from all around the United States and Canada.

The Pirates fared well considering the stiff competition, beating Sir Thomas Moore High School of British Columbia and losing close contests to Southland favorite Durango High School and Martin Luther King Jr. High School of New York.

Faceoff with Fontana

Although the Pirates will not see the likes of powerhouses such as Mater Dei, which participated in the Vegas tourney, they will have their work cut out for them in the first round, facing off against Fontana High on Thursday, Dec. 26.

Bringing home a consolation championship trophy last weekend from Palma's Scattini Tournament boosted the team's morale as well as its record, which now stands at 2-3 after having dropped its first three games.

In the tourney's first round on Thursday, Dec. 12, El Molino, which successfully defended its Scattini crown, defeated the Pirates 72-56 despite being down for most of the first half.

Turning the corner

Stevenson looked like an entirely different team in its next outing the following night as they ousted Santa Cruz Athletic League foe Harbor, 67-64 in the second round.

Fresh off their first win of the young season, the Pirates carried that momentum into Saturday's consolation game. RLS junior point guard Jason Ware tallied 22 to lead his team to a 61-43 romp over North Monterey County.

For the three games, Ware finished with 55 total points, second among the eight teams and good for all-tournament honors. Junior center Matt Mraule was the second leading scorer on the team with 42 points.

Looking past?

Though RLS rolled to the win Saturday over North Monterey County, Hankison warned his team not to underestimate the Condors the second time around as they were missing three starters in last week's game.

For those who can't attend tonight's RLS-North County game in person, KSPB-FM 91.9 will air the game live.

INVITATIONAL

Invitational, which runs through Saturday. Fifty years strong, the Padres have always hosted a well-organized, competitive showcase for the top area teams.

This year is no different as King City, Seaside, defending champion Miramonte, Monterey, Washington-Fremont, Salinas (undefeated this year and early favorites), North Tahoe and the host Padres will be shooting for the championship trophy.

The last time Carmel won its own event was 1992, when R.J. Powell, then a junior at CHS and now a sophomore at Pepperdine University, corralled the MVP award.

The Invitational is nothing new to Carmel's first-year head coach Mike Woodie, who played in the '80 tournament for Monterey High.

Carmel caps the opening round with an 8 p.m. tipoff against North Tahoe.

"I'm not going to underestimate anybody who comes in front of us," said Woodie of tonight's foe.

Elsewhere today . . .

Other first round matchups today will find King City playing Seaside at 3:30 p.m., Miramonte of Orinda against Monterey at 5 p.m. and Washington of Fremont versus Salinas at 6:30 p.m.

If Carmel wins its opener, it will play the winner of the Washington-Salinas game at 8 p.m. Friday. If the Padres lose, they will square off at 5 p.m. against the loser of that game.

The Friday night schedule calls for two other games, at 3:30 and 6 p.m., while Saturday's slate has the championship game set to tip off at 7:30 p.m. The third-place game will be played at 6 p.m.; the consolation contest gets underway at 4:30 p.m.

Tickets will be available at the door each night. More information: 624-1821.

After trouncing Seaside, Padre girls, 3-4, travel to North Salinas tonight

By PATRICK FOUDY
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

ON THE HEELS of a convincing non-league win Tuesday night at Seaside High, the Carmel High School girls varsity basketball team resumes action tonight at 6:45 against host North Salinas.

The Padres roared out to a 32-14 halftime lead against Seaside before posting a 59-30 win. Shannon Dougherty led the way with 20 points, while Kim Dickerhoof tallied 11.

The victory upped Carmel's record to 3-4.

Breakers Classic

Over the weekend, the Padre girls came away with fourth place in the 10-team Breakers Classic at Pacific Grove High School.

Carmel kept itself in the winner's bracket with a 61-29 thumping over Mercy in last Thursday's opening round. But two defeats followed — a 58-43 decision to Monterey and a 55-43 verdict against Los Banos.

Dickerhoof (16) and Dougherty (14) led the way for CHS in the romp over Mercy. Sophomore Michelle Ocampo added 10.

Michelle Gaudoin and Dougherty each contributed 11 points against the rival Toreadores in a game played Friday evening. Monterey, which eventually lost in the championship game, was quicker and more aggressive while Carmel shooters struggled from the floor and the line.

Dougherty shined in the Los Banos game with 21 points, but the Padres couldn't keep up. Dickerhoof dominated the offensive boards and tallied 12 points.

Padre Sports Scene: Girls soccer team on fire early; wrestlers rally behind Stark, Call, Remynse

By TREVOR FOGG
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

THE CARMEL High School varsity girls soccer team launched into Mission Trail Athletic League play last week with impressive victories over King City and Alisal.

Against Alisal on Saturday afternoon, the visiting Padres scored two goals early and coasted to a 5-2 victory behind a strong defensive effort from emergency goalie Marisol Valdez, who was filling in for her cousin, Nancy Valdez.

Padre scoring was led by Nina Hendricks, who had two goals on assists from Katie Call and Andrea Dalessio. Dalessio also scored the team's other goal.

After falling behind to King City last Thursday, Carmel dominated the second half by scoring five unanswered goals en route to a 5-2 win. Sarah Coombe contributed a hat trick with three goals, while Hendricks added the other two Padre scores.

Freshman starter Stephanie Quinn chipped in with two assists. Dalessio also had two assists, while Natalie Johnson provided another. Fullback Kate Daley led the defensive charge.

The girls host Pacific Grove at 3:30 p.m. today.

■ WRESTLING

This year's squad is a tight-knit group of only seven athletes. In a novice tournament held at Alisal High for beginning wrestlers last Thursday, freshman Teddy Stark showed promise for the future by winning his first match.

The other freshman stalwart looks to be Mike Call, who put in valiant efforts but was pinned late in his two matches.

Carmel is led by returning senior star Jason Remynse, who will be a dominant force in the 275-pound division in the MTAL. Remynse, Stark and Call will be joined by Brandon Ingram, Jeff Vandervort, Ed Canadas and Travis Barter.

The team is coached by Pete DeVlamnick and will begin league play on Jan. 9 when it hosts Gonzales at 6:30 p.m.

■ FIELD HOCKEY

The Padres were defeated in both of their games last week, going down to North Salinas 2-1 last Thursday, then losing 3-1 to Robert Louis Stevenson the following day.

Carmel's record now sits at 0-3.

Coach Brenda Lamica remained steadfast in her positive attitude. "It's always nice to get the win, but the team played well," she said. "After falling behind, they only became more determined to score."

Both of Carmel's goals last week were scored by junior April Zobel.

The team won't resume league play until Jan. 9.

Kelly undecided on whether to drop CHS grid job

By SCOTT A. BROWN

CARMEL HIGH School varsity football coach Mike Kelly, who made overtures that he might resign his duties after his team lost its season finale to Pacific Grove, told The Pine Cone that he has not yet reached a final decision.

During the recently concluded season, Kelly, who himself was a football star at CHS in the early 1980s, guided the Padres to an overall record of 4-6 and 3-4 in the Mission Trail Athletic League. The season ended with a heartbreaking 21-20 loss to archrival Pacific Grove when the Breakers scored in the game's final minute.

During Kelly's two years as varsity head coach, the Padres are 6-14. Prior to his stint as varsity coach, Kelly led Carmel's junior varsity team.

Mike Kelly

"I want to digest the season and everything that's happened and give it its proper post-mortem," said Kelly. "I want to close out the season in the proper fashion, the way every coach does."

"As it gets closer to baseball season, I'll be nearer to a decision," said Kelly, who also is head coach of the CHS boys' varsity baseball team, which is coming off a championship season.

Kelly, who replaced Craig Johnston beginning the 1995 season, indicated his decision will be an emotional one.

"I've invested a lot here," said Kelly, who operates an insurance firm in Carmel.

Help preserve a piece of Carmel's coast

Dear Editor:

Carmel area residents have a unique opportunity to give themselves a lasting holiday gift — one of the last privately owned properties at Carmel Point is for sale.

The property, which consists of four distinct lots, is located on Scenic Drive just north of Ocean View.

If you've ever walked around Carmel Point and enjoyed the splendid vistas in the early morning when the ocean sparkles or by evening light when it glimmers gold, or visited its tide pools at low tide, or sat on the rocks and spotted sea otters bobbing in the surf; then you'll know how important it is to preserve this incomparable Carmel landmark.

Did you have any clue that this priceless piece of coastline was privately owned? No? Well, neither did we. The two of us were astounded one day to find that orange netting and a "Preservation Pending" sign had been installed on the property.

These actions, understandably, have provoked a lot of interest from adjacent property owners, who stand to lose their view, as well as from visitors and Peninsula residents who cherish this bit of unprotected real estate.

The good news is that the owner, Colin Kuster, son of Carmel theater pioneer Ted Kuster, very much wants this property to remain undeveloped for the continued enjoyment of all. Mr. Kuster generously has given the Big Sur Land Trust an option to purchase the land at a bargain price so that it will remain as scenic open space for all of us to enjoy for all time.

The lot is zoned Resource Conservation Coastal Zone (RC/CZ), which would allow a marine laboratory or some other coastal dependent facility to be built on that site. Do you "get our point?" Any building, no matter what its use, would adversely affect the scenic quality and restrict the public's access to this dramatic meeting of land and sea.

Of course you want to help. But how?

Backward priorities: Money that went to RSC foes could have gone to strained '911' operations

Dear Editor:

In November The Herald and local television stations covered quite extensively the "sweat shop" conditions under which our Office of Emergency Services dispatchers are forced to function.

Unhealthy work areas, under-staffing, which thus requires long work hours and minimal time off for those on staff, as well as the emotional and psychological stress of handling 911 calls, were some of the problems addressed in the media.

Hard on the heels of this coverage came a most disturbing Herald article on Dec. 5. According to the report, the attorney and "voluntary paralegals" working to defeat Measure M — the Rancho San Carlos development issue — have been awarded nearly $92,000 in fees related to costs involved in pursuit of their goal of winning the lawsuit to put M on the ballot. Superior Court Judge Paik further ruled that the owners of Rancho San Carlos and Monterey County must split the payment of these fees!

Appropriate outrage

Fellow taxpayers, are you as outraged by this ruling as I am?

Whether you were for or against the passage of Measure M is not important here. What is important is that these people — private citizens who did ultimately accomplish their goal — are being rewarded for their efforts, in part, with public money. Why was it not ruled that the attorney in question should be seeking his fees from the private citizens who hired him? And why are these "volunteer paralegals" being paid for volunteering?

Meanwhile, the employees with the Office of Emergency Services continue to work in an unhealthy environment, poorly paid, overworked and apparently ignored by county officials.

In 1994 the Monterey County Civil Grand Jury reviewed and reported on Proposition 172, a California constitutional amendment entitled the Local Public Safety Protection Act of 1993. The proposition was approved by voters and became effective Jan. 1, 1994.

It mandated public safety as the first priority of local government and established a permanent half-cent sales tax to finance it. The Grand Jury was interested in how the county was using the funds and if they were being used in accord with the intent of the amendment.

While a portion of the Grand Jury's report listed numerous public safety agencies that were considered the most in need of funds to continue functioning efficiently, the Office of Emergency Services was not mentioned. Yet employees from that office have apparently been struggling with their problems much longer than Proposition 172 has been in effect.

Regardless of how long that particular struggle has continued, it is quite apparent to me that priorities in Monterey County and its courts are seriously skewed. Private citizens and a shrewd and zealous lawyer are going to receive $92,000, a most generous award, to be supplied in part by public money which should be better used for services that all the citizens of this county need and must have.

It was coincidental that these two issues were reported just days apart. But is certainly an excellent example of the contrast between giving perks to a special interest group while possibly taking needed funds away from important agencies.

Keep all this in mind when you call 911, or any other public safety agency, and encounter problems which could jeopardize your safety and possibly your life because it seemed more expedient to give public money to private citizens than to consider first what the consequences of such action might be.

Perhaps the incoming 1997 Civil Grand Jury might be interested in looking for other examples of such "gifting" and questioning the legality of it. I understand the concept of encouraging participation by citizens in government. However, bending the rules and then insisting that we all pay for the resulting legal costs is damaging to the democratic process.

City Talk

Stop and smell the forest: 1996 was fine year for Carmel

By KEN WHITE
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

IT IS my sincere hope that the joys of this special season will fill the lives of each of you and that, as you look back on 1996, you will find much for which to be thankful.

As your mayor, I have been privileged to preside at our many city council meetings throughout the year. On the whole, it was a year to be proud of and one which saw your community and city council accomplish a great deal.

Among the highlights:

■ There is a fine agreement in place with the city's Garden Club that will ensure a wonderful resting spot at Piccadilly Park.

■ We successfully fought to retain our own ambulance service in the community.

■ We have continued active participation in the effort to ensure appropriate reuse of the Fort Ord lands.

■ A virtually unanimous consensus was reached by the commissions on the EIR for the Sunset Center Theater remodel project. (The project comes before the council in February.)

■ The Mission Trail Park Master Plan was finalized.

■ Our wonderful city staff completed another year of outstanding service.

■ Through the generosity of many, the Mayor's Youth Fund continued to offer free concerts to the community during the summer months.

■ We had an absolutely first-rate celebration of the city's 80th birthday.

■ And we enjoyed a truly special evening this month with the activities associated with the annual tree-lighting.

The year also saw many of our neighbors regularly give of their personal time to attend what — perhaps — seems like endless meetings. Commissions, boards, committees, subcommittees, working Groups — each investing untold hours deliberating, researching, consulting, planning, thinking — for the betterment of our community.

All told, there are more than 70 Carmelites who have graciously accepted appointments to serve their neighbors in this manner, who go quietly about the business of tackling the issues and, sometimes, tough problems that confront us all in municipal government

We are very thankful for their efforts and look forward to working with these wonderful volunteers in 1997 and beyond.

On a less personal, but quite important, level, 1996 has been a year with fewer fiscal woes for the City than some years in recent memory. The business climate continues to improve and municipal revenues are stable. Our strong reserves continue to grow, providing solid fiscal security for the City.

As we celebrate this holiday season and enter 1997, please join me in taking a good look around — stop and smell the forest's perfume and the scent of the ocean; watch the fog roll in — so that we may all realize once again how truly blessed we are to live in this special place we call Carmel-by-the-Sea.

On behalf of the city council, I extend sincere warm wishes for happy holidays to each of you, and may your happiness this season be enhanced by the special joy that only giving and sharing can bring.

If each of us made an effort to do a random act of kindness this holiday season, then surely we will get a good start on a great 1997.

The Big Sur Land Trust has created "Get The Point," a fund drive to raise $150,000 to purchase this priceless one-half acre treasure which has special value to residents, visitors and the entire Carmel community. (For comparison purposes, a standard 40-by-100 Carmel lot has a minimum value of $250,000.)

Public spirited groups, such as the Carmel Open Space Task Force, the Carmel Residents Association, the Tor House Foundation and the Surfrider Foundation have endorsed the purchase of this property. And the Carmel-by-the-Sea City Council, at its Dec, 10 meeting, voted unanimously, not only to support this project, but to allocate $10,000 toward its preservation.

All told, since Nov. 22 of this year, over $70,000 has been raised. But the Big Sur Land Trust needs to come up with double that figure by the end of this month when its option runs out. Residents and business people, as well as visitors to Carmel-by-the-Sea — we need your help! So, drive by, take a look and try to envision a structure on this gorgeous property! You can help make this impossible by giving to this worthwhile community effort.

Your gift to the "Get The Point" campaign is tax deductible and will help ensure the preservation of this extraordinary property. It just might be the best holiday present you ever gave yourself! Thank you!

Checks or pledges in any amount, made payable to "Get The Point." may be sent to the Big Sur Land Trust, P.O. Box 221864, Carmel, CA 93922.

Unintended consequences

Dear Editor:

I read with dismay about the land in Odello West that is being made available to Caltrans by California State Parks for "mitigation" of anticipated wetland destruction in Hatton Canyon.

Not so many years ago there was a public subscription drive to undertake the purchase of Odello West to keep it from development. Many citizens, myself included, contributed substantially to this effort. With help from the city of Carmel and California State Parks, the undertaking succeeded. The land was purchased and put in custody of California State Parks.

I did not contribute to this endeavor to assist Caltrans in proceeding with construction of Hatton Canyon Freeway to which I am unalterably opposed.

The royal treatment

Dear Editor:

Responding to Joe Fitzpatrick's Dec. 5. column in the Pine Cone, I would like to add some information about the visit of Her Royal Highness Crown Princess Soamsawali of Thailand.

Princess Soamsawali, her mother, Bhansawali Kitiyakara, and her official entourage of four ladies-in-waiting, a physician, hairdresser, the consul general, body guards, and two Thai television cameramen, arrived in Carmel Nov. 27 for a scheduled visit.

Because her mother's home on Lincoln Street was being renovated, the Princess and her group stayed at the Pine Inn on Ocean Avenue.

That first night, they dined at Il Fornaio restaurant. Although the Princess was surrounded by her ladies-in-waiting, interpreters, Secret Service men and bodyguards, they in no way interrupted the activities of the hotel or the other hotel guests.

They did not want any special treatment during their visit, and they especially did not want to disrupt the activities of others. The entourage ate their breakfast at Il Fornaio, and the Princess ate her breakfast of poached eggs, ham and tomato juice in her suite.

The group initially planned to have lunch at Il Fornaio, but decided to select a different site for change. They asked the front desk staff at the hotel for suggestions and Porta Bella was a recommended restaurant.

The Porta Bella, selected because of its closeness to the hotel, was called to see if they could in fact handle such a large group on such short notice on Thanksgiving day.

The "female voice with the unfamiliar accent" calling the restaurant, was Elizabeth Scott, Pine Inn customer services representative. Following the luncheon, the Princess and her entourage returned to the Pine Inn where she met with local Thai citizens and their families in the hotel lobby.

It was a joyous occasion for all involved, and one they will probably never forget. I know it was for me. I, too, am a Pine Inn customer services representative, and as the entourage was getting ready to depart, the Princess thanked me and the staff of the Pine Inn for a most enjoyable stay, and stated "she would return again someday to beautiful Carmel and to the Pine Inn."

REACTION

they're preparing for second place (with Palma always winning the MTAL).

"I'm not concerned about us dropping to a 'C' league. We don't play for the CCS playoff spot. We play for parity in competition week to week, the feeling that we could win a championship. Plus, we didn't send an at-large team to CCS in baseball last year or football this year as a 'B' league.

"This way, we send two teams for sure (one each from the Peninsula and Valley divisions) and still have a chance to win a championship that has eluded us for the 13 straight years Palma has had it."

■ Ted Robinson, varsity football head coach, Monterey High School:

"(Now) we don't have to worry about scheduling. Before we had to add three non-league games to make a schedule. Now, if you take the nine teams in our league and add our sister school, Seaside, as a practice game, you've got a full 10 games."

■ Jim Morton, athletic director, Santa Catalina School:

"I believe this alleviates a lot of problems and is close to ideal. My concern is that this realignment is not in concert with the CCS playoff system. Whereas you get two playoff points for a league win, you get three for a win against an upper-division opponent. You can only challenge upper-division opponents in the preseason, which will be difficult with 11 women's teams in the MTAL."

■ Larry Snyder, principal, Monterey High School and chairman of CCS Realignment Subcommittee:

"What it comes down to is whether you want a league comprised of like-sized or Peninsula schools. I proposed a Peninsula league with Monterey, North County, Carmel, Seaside, Pacific Grove and Stevenson. But we met resistance from the smaller schools.

"The thing is, someone needs to be the biggest and smallest in every league. Now we're the smallest school out of the 10 in the new MBL, whereas we would've been the second largest in my proposal."

■ Jim Mortenson, athletic director, Alisal High School:

"We won't be able to compete in football. Our program may be gone in two years. We don't have youth programs feeding our team. Many of our kids speak English as a second language. Also, despite our large attendance, we have huge student turnover because families follow the transient migrant farm seasons."

Young listeners encounter magic of verse through grandmother's poetry

IN AND OUT THE WINDOW: CHILDHOOD IN VERSE by Jacqueline Bandel, with illustrations by Camille LaPointe; Amberly Books, Oakland, CA; 1996. Hardback, 45 pages. $16.95.

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

JACQUELINE BANDEL imagined her retirement, and that of her husband Robert, a former U.C. Berkeley professor, as one in which she would "walk into the sunset, hand in hand with my husband; I thought we'd go to Carmel, drive up Highway 1, see the coast when the fog lifts and have more time."

It hasn't turn out quite that way. Bandel, a Berkeley poet and grandmother, now 64, spends a great deal of time reading verse to children, ages 3 to 11 — preschool through fifth grade — inducing them to act out the poems with verve and enthusiasm, aided with props ranging from wigs to confetti.

It is Bandel's belief that if children hear poetry "in a way that is not only educational, but fun, and brings them pleasure, they simply don't forget it."

Poems by Robert Frost and Shakespeare are included in these interactive readings, but a great number of the verses she reads are from her recently published book, "In and Out the Window: Childhood in Verse," a compilation of 35 poems written over the years for her four children, who now range in age from 36 to 44.

Some of the poems are only four lines, such as "The Pine Tree" which reads: "I'm a pine tree/Tall and proud./And when it's windy/I talk out loud."

What a delightful way to introduce poetry, and the sense of poetry, to a child who will learn to listen to trees "talking" when the wind blows.

The poems vary in length — some up to 14 stanzas — but they all have charming little tales to tell, introducing young listeners or readers to the sound and cadence and alliteration of rhymed verse.

"Autumn Leaves" reads: "The fall leaves crinkle/As you sweep/Them all together/In a heap./-They crunch and make/A cracking sound/As you stamp them/On the ground./Crinkling/Cracking/-Crunching/Leaves./Autumn voices/Sure to please."

Not all the poems concern things in nature. One discusses a child's favorite dinner menus, as in the seven-stanza "Chicken Soup" ("I'm eating chicken soup with noodles/Mother says I'll love it

Local families' artistic legacy endures into fourth generation

By SUE BARTON

'High Tea' is representative of Missy Jenkins' highly detailed oil paintings of children. Her work is currently shown at New Master's Gallery on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh in Carmel.

THE MONTEREY Peninsula is famous for nurturing the artistic heart. Nature here takes her most elegant guise, spectacular but not flashy. Her most obvious charms are most obviously captured on film and canvas. But in the case of the talents of three generations of two local families, she has brought more subtle influences to bear in their choice of subject matter and medium.

Contemporary artist Melissa Jenkins was born at what was then Carmel Hospital, in February 1955. Raised by her maternal grandparents, "Tom" and Marian Sawyer, she grew up in the Carmel Highlands and attended local schools, studying art at MPC.

Her grandfather owned extensive acreage on both the east and west sides of Highway 1 in the Highlands, from San Remo to Malpaso. Sawyer bought it for investment purposes but also because it reminded him of Scotland, where he served in the Black Watch Regiment during World War I. A graduate of Yale, he retired from a position as second-in-command at the U.S. Treasury in San Francisco, bringing his family to Carmel in the 1940s. He offered to sell some of his land to his brothers for $1,000 an acre, but they wouldn't invest in those one-time "backwoods." Sawyer had paid $150,000 for his land and eventually sold portions to Clint Eastwood.

By the time Missy was grown, the property had been sold, the money spent. Just the same, she received a valuable legacy from her grandfather in the recordings of the bagpipe bands he had brought back from Scotland, to which she had been listening since she was small.

Subsequently, Missy studied the instrument and currently makes a contribution to local folklore. She plays the pipes at sunset on Tuesdays at the Inn at Spanish Bay. Her 12-year-old daughter, Audie, is also a musician who plays drums with The Prince Charles Junior Pipe Band.

Marjorie Allen, a noteworthy local painter whose subjects included the area's wildlife, also drew upon the peninsula's aura of mystery. This is her self-portrait.

Missy gained further exposure to creative influences from her paternal grandmother, Marjorie Allen.

Allen, a noteworthy local painter whose subject matter included the area's wildlife, also drew upon the peninsula's aura of mystery. Today, Marjorie's painting of the water nymph, Ondine, troubles her 2-year-old great-granddaughter, Lane, to the degree that it had to be removed from the room.

Missy remembers time spent with Allen in her studio in the Highlands and later in Monterey in a house Allen purchased from painter Armin Hansen. The house was long ago torn down to make room for medical and professional buildings.

"It always seemed mysterious in Marjorie's studio," says Missy. In Monterey, the studio consisted of a large room on the ground floor of the two-story house. Its northwest facing wall was a huge window that encompassed the kitchen and dining areas. It had a kaleidoscopic quality, filled with things that made it paradise to a curious child.

In addition to paints, easels and

'TARTUFFE' AMUSES WITH POLISHED PLAYERS; BUT WHY SUCH A RADICAL CHANGE OF PLACE?

By MARK SHILSTONE-LAURENT

WHAT: Moliere's comedy, 'Tartuffe'
WHEN: 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday
WHERE: Main Stage Theatre, Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey
COST: $15 general; $11 students/seniors; $7 children through age 12
INFO/RESERVATIONS: 646-4213

OTHER THAN a "Yeah, OK, but why?" updated staging, MPC's current production of Moliere's wonderful 17th century farce, "Tartuffe," is a great holiday season diversion. It is crisply staged, well acted and shows off the talents of a number of local designers and performers.

"Tartuffe" is a simple story. A shyster, Tartuffe (Michael Jacobs) poses as a holy man in order to do some serious freeloading off the rich and powerful Orgon (Ron Danko). But he finds Orgon to be such an incredibly soft touch (OK, maybe gullible old idiot is closer to the truth) that he expands his scam to include marrying Orgon's daughter Mariane (Jenia Kaminer), fondling his wife (Ivy Cates) and stealing his fortune.

A lot is written about "Tartuffe" as Moliere's "... timeless tale of religious fraud." But come on, "Tartuffe" is not even a real member of the church — the priest bit is just the latest in his long line of scams. This isn't Jim Bakker or Jimmy Swaggart, it's just the age-old story of con artists and the hapless dimwits who serve as their prey.

In the title role, Michael Jacobs is cast to perfection. As one of the area's finest performers, he has demonstrated that he can handle heavy dramatic roles. His Salieri in the recent Pacific Rep production of "Amadeus" and his Iago in "Othello" at The Outdoor Forest Theatre serve as proof. But Jacobs is most at home with comedy and the role of Tartuffe fits him like a pair of spandex bicycle pants.

He mugs, pratfalls and schticks his way to a basically flawless characterization, never missing the tiniest comic opportunity. This is a showcase performance not to be missed. And the good news is that he is surrounded by a strong supporting cast with no weak links.

Ron Danko's skillful portrayal of the easily duped Orgon, obviously not the sharpest knife in the drawer, provides the perfect foil for Jacobs' Tartuffe. Neva Hahns, as Orgon's motormouth mother is, as we have come to BORED WITH the traditional holiday meats: goose, turkey, beef? This Christmas season may I suggest a fillet or two of ostrich?

Acclaimed to be low in fat, cholesterol and calorie count, ostrich is the new "in" red meat and it is available locally for your holiday entertaining.

Personally I've long had an ostrich fetish. Perhaps it all started with a floor-length strapless evening dress with ostrich feathers covering the whole bodice which I wore over a merry widow corset to long ago debutante parties on Long Island. On a trip to South Africa in 1983, I drove about 100 miles out into the veldt to an ostrich farm with the intent of riding one of those 300 pound, 7-foot beauties. And what a sensation it was! I mounted and my black and white feathered male swiveled his neck around and blinked one of his large lash-covered eyes at me and we were off, at a walk.

In the 18th century, wild ostrich was hunted almost to extinction as the demand for their decorative feathers and skin for fine leather products was a fanatical craze. To meet the booming export demands ostrich farming was developed. Often single shipments to the U.S. could weigh as much as 20 tons.

The pale brown female lays from 12 to 15 eggs in a ground nest that she sits on during the day with her black and white mate spelling her at night. Each egg weighs from three to three and one-half pounds. Pajaro Dunes grower Micky Holzman says one egg equals about 24 chicken eggs, a Schwarzenegger-sized omelet.

"Hard boil an egg, which will take about 1.5 hours, and you have enough egg salad sandwiches for a week," Micky says with a chuckle.

After the incubation period of 42-43 days, a gangly 1.5 pound chick emerges. Growing a foot a month for the first eight months and able to run as fast as an adult in just one month, the young bird will be ready for slaughter in 10 to 14 months.

As an ostrich advocate right here and now I want to clear up the misconception that an ostrich when frightened will bury its head in the sand. Not so. Generally the swift-footed bird will run when confronted by danger but otherwise will lie flat on the ground behind cover if possible with its neck outstretched to avoid detection. So pooh to that poor, dumb ostrich legend.

This year's Neiman Marcus catalog is featuring an ostrich sampler. Call (800) 825-8000 if you are shopping by phone this season.

But choice ostrich cuts are available locally at Tuesday's farmer's market on Alvarado Street in Monterey. Bruce and Cindy Wedlake from their Running Eagle Ostrich ranch in Soledad are offering fillets at $13.99 lb., steak loin for $8.80 lb. and ground ostrich priced at $3.50 lb. Samples of jerky or hot flavorful burgers are available for your sampling pleasure. To place an order, call Bruce at 675-7861 and he will deliver your order anywhere on the Monterey Peninsula. Try it, you'll like it.

Over the Thanksgiving holiday I visited my daughter Cornelia and her family in Cambridge, Mass. One of my house presents to them was a fillet of ostrich which generously feeds three.

Cornelia marinated the defrosted filet for a couple of hours in a mock cumberland sauce that we named

Cambridge Marinade

1 cup port
1/2 cup orange juice
1 Tbsp. olive oil
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/4 teaspoon allspice
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
A couple of turns of fresh ground pepper

Meanwhile my son-in-law Jim stoked up the outdoor grill and barbecued the meat over a hot bed of coals for three to four minutes per side, similar to cooking venison. Although I had eaten ostrich and had compared it to a denser type of beef while visiting South Africa, this barbecued fillet far surpassed my previous meal. This was almost fork-cutting tender and very flavorful.

Christmas day this year I plan to visit my second daughter Freya and her family who live in Berkeley. I told them I would bring the fillets and you can guess what they will be.

'TARTUFFE'...

expect, delightful. Jani Davis, obviously the audience's favorite next to Jacobs, is a stitch as Dorine, the family maid. She does, however, tend to allow her voice to drift up into a high and sometimes grating range when she gets cooking.

Ivy Cates, just a few years removed from a brilliant performance as the frail young Amanda in "The Glass Menagerie," is still too young to be playing anybody's mother. Here she portrays Elmire, Orgon's wife and mother of his two children. But aside from the age consideration, it is a strong performance. And local directors always looking for new blood will be drooling over newcomer Jenia Kraminer. Her characterization is rock solid and man!, what a beautifully trained voice.

As usual, Ron Cohen is strong. And extra homage must be paid to Cohen for bravely carrying on with a monologue to Tartuffe while being unashamedly upstaged as Jacobs turns a bowl of fruit and a decanter of wine into a classic, scene-stealing comic bit. (This from a reviewer/actor who once spent half of a scene picking his fanny in "The Nerd" in one of the cheaper, upstaging, scene-stealing capers in recent years! Look who's talking!)

The fine supporting cast is rounded out by Henry J. Gueveara, Christopher John Anderson, Lynette Graves, Michael Moody and Bill Lindsey.

As for the direction, guest director James Dunn's staging is fluid and varied and he has obviously made it very clear to his cast the importance of the almost breakneck pacing this kind of comedy demands. But he has chosen to update the costumes and most of the set to modern times, a choice that ends up reading as irrelevant and superfluous.

Whereas the updating in Pacific Rep's recent "Henry V" and in the current film version of "Romeo and Juliet" help make those texts more understandable and immediate, the updating here doesn't really serve any other purpose than to show off Dunn's penchant for textual time travel in a lot of his productions. This is such a clear and easy-to-follow translation of the text, it doesn't need the help. In fact, I found myself yearning for the period powdered wigs and snuff boxes at times.

Scenic Designer Mark Haniuk has designed a fine set, obviously based on Dunn's interpretation/concept. The main playing area is Orgon's drawing room, a wide open space with minimal furniture and dressed with some pieces from the period that this rich Parisian may well have purchased. That works all right but the external backdrop is questionable at best.

Michael Jacobs has the title role in the Monterey Peninsula College Theatre Co. production of 'Tartuffe.' Ivy Cates portrays Elmire, Orgon's wife.

The external set is not just Paris, but a seedy section of the town, dominated by sex shops and strip joints complete with a silhouette of a naked woman with red, flashing nipples. OK, but what the heck does that have to do with the text? There are no allusions to a crass or immoral historical or physical setting for the play. In fact, the happily-ever-after ending implies a great moral stability in the country. The character Tartuffe is a comic aberration, not some great symbol of moral decay sweeping France.

As usual, the technical support is aces. Constance Gamiere's costumes are great, from Ivy Cates' slinky gowns to Jani Davis' skimpy maid outfit. And D. Thomas Beck's lighting design creates just the right moods.

This is a fast paced, comic whirlwind that will play to happy full houses. Grab a seat if you can. If you overlook Dunn's questionable update, Jacobs and company will give you a wild ride of delicious farce.

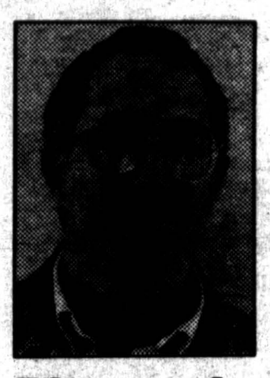
Time to close out an impressive year

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

THE JAZZ STORE closes out an impressive year of performances this weekend with a pair of concerts sure to please the most discriminating of jazz fans. Friday night, Boston-based vocalist Rebecca Parris returns to Carmel for the first time since her show-stopping performances in April at the Jazz Store and at the Big Sur Jazz Festival. A performer's performer, Parris is the complete package; an enchanting jazz singer who possesses the rare combination of vocal ability and natural stage presence. A recent listen to her CD, Love Comes and Goes, reminded me of this lady's keen ability to breathe life into each and every song. Her dynamic vocal style is complemented by her sensitivity to her material and she possesses that rare ability to make each and every listener feel as though she is singing directly to them.



Rebecca Parris

Saturday's performance by the Kevin Gibbs Trio is a Christmas Special; the perfect jazz concert for the holiday season. Gibbs, a pianist in the tradition of George Shearing, Bill Evans and Dave McKenna, will play selections from his Concord release, Christmas Presence. The album is a bridge between the classic and the contemporary, a collection of exquisite traditional Christmas melodies played in the language of jazz. Since moving to San Francisco in 1990 from the Boston area, Gibbs has established himself as an integral part of the San Francisco jazz scene. Gibbs will be joined on Saturday by John Wiitala on bass and Bud Spangler on drums. Both Friday and Saturday's concerts start at 7:30 p.m. and performers will play two sets. Tickets are $20. For reservations call 624-6432.

More jazz can be heard this month at Kate's Table in Carmel Valley on Sundays, Dec. 22 and 29, when drummer Dottie Dodgion presents her Women in Jazz concert series featuring Virginia Mayhew on tenor sax and Dina DeRose on piano. Dottie recently returned from a successful tour of jazz clubs in Japan and she has also been busy singing at clubs in San Francisco.

Although everybody seems to think that the local popular music scene is dominated by blues and jazz, a recent assessment of the growing number of new rock 'n' roll bands has made me wonder. CDs have been released by Lovers & Strangers, Trial By Fire, Gel, Dura-Delinquent and by recent transplants from Los Angeles, Mockingbird; a host of other rock 'n' roll groups including Free Ears, Vera, Foamscape, the Mudskippers, Amazon Mollies (to name only a few) all have enough original music to release products of their own. Doc's Nightclub continues to support rock 'n' roll, and Monterey's newest hot spot, Monterey Billiards, has decided to give the genre a chance. 3 spirits promoters Brad and Susan Mallory have opted to book more shows at other venues and it all adds up to a promising future for rock 'n' roll musicians in 1997. Now if only people will come out and support these ambitious musical groups... A lot of these bands can be heard throughout downtown Monterey at this year's First Night Celebration and this writer encourages any fans of rock 'n' roll to participate.

With the release of its first CD, a collection of 12 original songs recorded more than five years ago, Lovers & Strangers has reestablished its position as

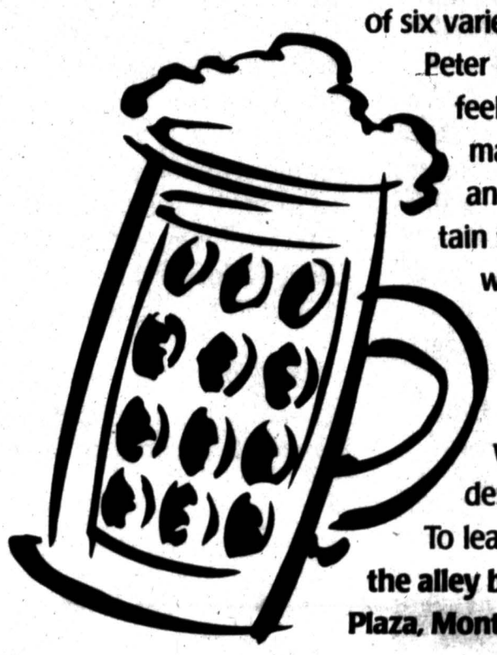
Feature of the Week:

Peter B's Brew Pub

Peter B's Brew Pub, opened last September at Monterey's DoubleTree Hotel, combines a restaurant and Monterey's only microbrewery under one roof. The pub features a smorgasbord of Carmel Brewery beers and surprisingly affordable prices on a variety of meal selections.

Patrons of Peter B's Brew Pub are not only able to watch Brewmaster Scott Kelley at work, they also have the opportunity to taste varieties of beer that are available exclusively at the brew pub. There are always four and up to six or seven styles of beer available only at Peter B's. To assist in enjoyment, patrons may try the 'sampler' of six varieties of beer.



Peter B's Brew Pub boasts a warm, casually elegant feel. A stone and mirror backdrop complements the mahogany bar. Booth seating is used exclusively, and six recessed spaces throughout the pub contain television sets. Since no pub would be complete without a pool table, one corner of Peter B's Brew Pub has been reserved for a traditional pool table, covered in claret felt.

The menu includes soups, burgers, sandwiches, pizzas, snacks and full entrees and desserts. Menu prices range from $1.50 to $10.95. To learn more, visit Peter B's Brew Pub, located on the alley behind the DoubleTree Hotel, Two Portola Plaza, Monterey. Call 649-4511.

MUSIC

I Cantori di Carmel logs impressive performance at Mission

By LYN BRONSON

I CANTORI di Carmel has always presented impressive winter programs at the Carmel Mission, and this year's was no exception. Director Sal Ferrantelli is a serious musician and presents serious programs on the highest professional level resulting in the establishment of I Cantori di Carmel as an institution that would do credit to any city in the world.

In the evening's printed program, I Cantori di Carmel acknowledges its affiliation with Monterey Peninsula College. Dr. Sal Ferrantelli is a distinguished member of the MPC music faculty, and everything he does in connection with its music curriculum reflects credit on himself and MPC. Of course we have to acknowledge that the two-year community college system does not attract the cream of the crop of young musicians. The best students, if they remain in California, will most probably pursue advanced music studies at USC, UCLA or the San Francisco Conservatory. Thus it should come as no surprise that I Cantori has few members of traditional college age, and its members are mostly mature adults who enroll as students in Dr. Ferrantelli's evening choral class at MPC. One of the principal advantages of this is that it affords the group excellent facilities in which to meet and rehearse. The bottom line is that Ferrantelli has reached out for and attracted a solid group of dedicated music lovers in the community who subject themselves to the rigid discipline of choral singing. Through the years these singers have developed a sheen of polished professionalism while never losing the essential joy of singing that we associate with the non-professional.

Thus, in addition to the MPC affiliation, Dr. Ferrantelli has created I Cantori di Carmel as a freestanding institution with a loyal and powerful board of directors. Producing musical events generates considerable expenses, and these expenses are never completely covered by ticket sales. Thus it is doubly gratifying that I Cantori enjoys sold-out houses and has cultivated additional financial support in the community from contributors and grants. As a testament to its considerable musical achievements, I Cantori will be making its second European tour during the summer of 1997.

Last Sunday's concert reflected the continuation of I Cantori's tradition of bringing us a thoughtfully chosen selection of music from the 16th to the 19th centuries, with some outstanding soloists in collaboration with a small orchestra of professionals from the community under the leadership of concert master David Dally.

The concert opened with four motets from the Renaissance by Thomas Morely, Tomas Luis de Victoria, Giovanni Maria Nanino and Jacobus Gallus. We heard creamy smooth ensemble in even the most complicated polyphonic writing, plus a lovely control of dynamic subtlety. For example, the suspensions at the end of the Agnus Dei by Thomas Morely were so carefully controlled with such a beautifully shaped pianissimo ending it brought tears to the eyes. The surprising changes of meter in the In Festo Natalis Domini by Victoria were delightful, and the exultant, vibrant performance of Ascendit Deus by Gallus provided an exhilarating finale to the group of motets.

The second portion of the program was a series of American Spirituals. In Rocking Jerusalem by John W. Work we heard the big, powerful voice of soprano Trish Schultz and the nicely resonant baritone Craig R. Huller as soloists. In Deep River, which followed, there was a dazzling display of choral singing with lovingly precise diction, intonation and an extraordinary control of dynamics. The concluding Spiritual, I Want to Be Ready, in an arrangement by Dr. Ferrantelli, featured soloists soprano Donna Marie Bartoli and once again baritone Huller, in a rousing and joyful rendition which brought a fire storm of applause.

Concluding the concert with orchestra added was the Lauda Jerusalem by Vivaldi and the "Coronation" Mass, K.317 by Mozart. The Vivaldi was a fine perfor-

Ahrens fills multiple roles in Mayflower Church concert

By LYN BRONSON

As THE Monterey County Symphony presented its first concert of the year in its Chamber Ensemble & Recital series last Saturday evening at the Mayflower Church in Pacific Grove, I was reminded of an amusing scene from the 1951 movie, "An American in Paris." In this film there is a sequence where pianist Oscar Levant is seated on stage in a concert playing Gershwin's Concerto in F. Suddenly the camera cuts to the concert master, and there is Oscar Levant playing violin; cut to principal cellist, and once again it's Oscar Levant. The camera keeps cutting to the other principal players in the orchestra and each time it's Oscar Levant. Finally the camera pulls back for a long shot, and through Hollywood's camera magic, every player in the orchestra is Oscar Levant!

Well, the Monterey County Symphony's Holiday Concert at the Mayflower Church featured Ken Ahrens, veteran director of the Monterey County Symphony Chorus, in almost as many roles in this concert. We observed Ken Ahrens greeting the audience, talking about some of the music, directing the chorus, playing the piano and performing an organ solo. He didn't sing and he didn't tap dance, but he did just about everything else.

And yet Mr. Ahrens has a wonderfully gracious and unselfish ability to share the limelight. And he did so with members of the Chorus who performed solos throughout the evening, with members of the Carmel High School Orchestra and its director Dick Robins, with accompanist Eleanor Avila, and with Monterey County Symphony's principal violist, Vladim. Khalikulov.

It was a treat to hear Mr. Khalikulov in an interesting work by Johann Nepomuk Hummel for viola and orchestra (with the ubiquitous Mr. Ahrens dispatching the orchestra part on the piano). Later in the program Khalikulov also appeared playing an important viola obbligato in Brahms Geistliches Wiegenlied with mezzo Anne Hannon displaying a wide range of expressive artistry.

A novelty on the evening's program was the participation of eight members of the Carmel High School Orchestra, directed by Dick Robins, in a medley of Christmas melodies. Of course we are not talking about New York City's High School of Music and Art, but a normal high school in a small town where athletic prowess reigns supreme and music is a neglected stepchild. That these students were there to play at all was a miracle, and to watch the loving expression on Dick Robins' face as he coaxed music from these seven string players and one flutist was one of the most moving events of the evening.

Soloists from the Chorus heard during the evening were soprano Anna Grobe, alto Kim Hartford, soprano Lynette Culbert, soprano Jenny Killam, tenor John Hughes, baritone Robert Eastman, tenor Dan Rose and soprano Leberta Renfro. Renfro deserves special mention because she was one of the outstanding hits of the evening, especially in her rendition of one of the Jester Hariston spirituals, "Mary's Little Boy Chile," with its captivating, almost calypso type rhythms which really brought down the house. Renfro has a lovely voice, rich and resonant, with crystal clear diction, and each time she appeared on the program she sang with magnificent authority.

The concert ended with Conrad Susa's "A Christmas Garland," a collection of Christmas songs. Some of these were in contemporary settings, while others were in more traditional form with the audience invited to join in the singing.

The next concert in this series will be "Mozart at the Golden Bough" at 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 2, and will include Mozart's E-flat Major Wind Serenade featuring 12 members of the Monterey County Symphony conducted by Clark Suttle.

mance, full of felicitous details and a relentless driving energy. The "Coronation" Mass introduced local audiences to the fine young soprano, Ariana Lise Newcomer, whose supple and powerful voice made quite an impression. The seasoned mezzo, Anne Hannon, who is no stranger to audiences here, and tenor David Rose had both appeared the previous evening in the Monterey County Symphony Chorus concert in Pacific Grove, and added a lovely quality to the vocal ensemble. Baritone David Cox, whom I was hearing for the first time, has an appropriately rich sound and ease in his singing which made a pleasing effect.

By far the meatiest work on the evening's program, the "Coronation" Mass received a vital and moving performance from the soloists, chorus and orchestra. Soprano Newcomer appeared in a solo in the Kyrie and again in the beginning of the Agnus Dei. All in all it was a solid performance from beginning to end, and the collaboration of the soloists, chorus and orchestra all came together in a musically satisfying manner.

PLUGGED IN...

Monterey's most popular rock 'n' roll band. Loaded with strong material (both political and romantic) penned by founding members Ray Bertolino and Steve Sippel, the group's self-titled CD was recorded at Beach Boy Al Jardine's recording studio in Big Sur and produced by veteran record producer Steve Heger. Still, as any true Lovers & Strangers fan will tell you, the group has plenty of newer and better material and a second album is definitely in order. Thanks to airplay provided by Rich Berlin of KMBY the group is riding a new wave of popularity and the quartet has found a renewed sense of commitment. Plans are now in the works to get their show back out on the road and a gig has been booked in Chico with Iguana Jive. Regular performances at Doc's Nightclub on Cannery Row have further enhanced their reputation as Monterey's premier party band; one of only a few local groups with a following. Lovers & Strangers performs at Doc's next Friday, Dec. 27 and again at Doc's on New Year's Eve.

Lovers & Strangers

Another local rock 'n' roll group with a CD under its belt, Randy Baldwin and Trial By Fire, performs at Doc's this Friday night and at Monterey Billiards on Washington Street on New Year's Eve. The group's album, Feel Good Music, released last year, was a departure from their trademark hard rock sound and revealed a more folksy introspective collection of original tunes. Baldwin's opening cut, "Take the Time," was judged to be one of the top 50 songs in the sixth annual Billboard song contest. Thanks also in part to connections made while Baldwin was on the road as the opening solo acoustic act for Great White, Baldwin and bandmates have made strides outside of the Monterey area and have found financial backing from music champion Chris Huntington. The group, comprised of Baldwin, guitarist Terry Terrana, bassist Gary Strothers and drummer Mike Shannon, has been together for less than three years but shows considerable poise and promise.

Taking an entirely different approach to the quest for rock 'n' roll success, Gel is the creation of local businessman/rock singer Matt Heimbold. The owner and founder of local indie label Black Olive Records, Heimbold, aka Matthew Sanacore, assembled a group of Monterey's finest rock musicians (including guitarist Tom Ayres, drummer Shane Tyler, bassist Guy Dubets and keyboardist Brian Chester) for the express purpose of recording an album of original songs that he wrote. The result is Gel, the self-titled release co-produced and mixed by Thom Wilson, producer of the multi-platinum selling Offspring album, Smash. Gel's first release, which received immediate airplay on Los Angeles radio station KROQ, is a hook-loaded album of catchy rock tunes played by a talented group of musicians. Do not be misled by Gel's '60s guise on the CD's cover, the group's sound has a modern rock edge that complements the soulful rock voice of singer Sanacore.

Meanwhile local youngsters Dura-Delinquent, a seminal punk/grunge band hard-pressed to find a place to play locally, has managed to land a record deal with Spacebaby Records and they recently returned to Monterey from a national promotional tour. A review in the Nov. 29 issue of San Francisco's BAM magazine praised the group for its "no holding back" performance at the Kilowatt, a hip club in the city. Said music critic Johnny Angel for BAM, "It's a rare day indeed when anything riles up the jaded souls of routine San Fran club-goers. ...So, when Dura-Delinquent caused a near riot at the Kilowatt on the opening date of their first national tour, I was impressed." Dura-Delinquent upon returning to Monterey performed a gig at the Black Box on the campus of CSUMB.

Promoting concerts has become a way of life for the husband and wife combo of Brad and Susan Mallory and after 44 Sand Jams at their Sand City Warehouse the 3 spirit promoters have found it necessary to book more shows at other local venues. Last week's 3 spirits Christmas party at McGarrett's was a moderate success and will be followed by a series of performances at Doc's Nightclub and Monterey Billiards. Upcoming events include a Rock for Aids Benefit at Doc's on Thursday, Dec. 26 with the Hutchinsons, Mockingbird and 420 Express; another triple bill featuring The Sunshine Club, Free Ears and Amazon Mollies at Doc's on Jan. 9; and the return of the "3 spirits Circus" at the Monterey Billiards with trapeze artist Judith Flex and Black Olive Recording artist P. Hux on Saturday, Jan. 11.

Support the music you love and have a happy and peaceful holiday.

California Trends

By Bradley Inman

LAST WEEK the stock of software giant Microsoft split and immediately rose more than 5 percent in just two days. With it, the net worth of Microsoft founder Bill Gates rose to nearly $25 billion.

What do you do with such wealth?

Here is my advice to the multi-billionaire.

Bill, these technology stocks may be artificially inflated. Instead, move your money into California real estate, which is coming out of a six-year lull and, therefore, should be a good buy.

But my advice isn't to just

Emotions run gamut as '96 comes to a close

Realtor Link

By Jeanette Menter

THE AFFILIATES once again delivered an exciting, delicious and beautiful Christmas party at the Embassy Suites on Friday, Dec. 6 that was attended by more than 250 people in the real estate and related industries.

The entertainment included a unique trio, "The Extremes" (a take-off on The Supremes), which was a real treat, as well as a local version of that legendary group, "The Village People," comprised of some well-known and talented guys.

Throw in a lot of delicious food and dancing and you have a fun evening that everyone called a success.

■ More good news . . .

Speaking of the Affiliates, the new board has been elected. I will be the chairperson for '97; Davide Leal, co-chair and liaison; Stephanie Ottone, secretary; and Dick Shea, treasurer.

Carole Appleing has graciously agreed to produce the Affiliate's quarterly newsletter.

The first Affiliate meeting of the new year will be on Jan. 12.

■ Who's making news . . .

Mary Lynn Pinto has joined the Home Mortgage Network as a financial services officer, based in the Coldwell Banker offices in Carmel and Pacific Grove.

Also, Lawrence Lyonhardt, a Realtor on the Peninsula, has been awarded the Certified Residential Specialist (CRS) designation by the Residential Sales Council of the Realtors National Marketing Institute, an affiliate of the National Association of Realtors. Less than 4 percent of all Realtors hold this designation.

■ News you can use . . .

Le Petit Trianon, a design center in Carmel, has a special offer for real estate agents: You will receive one hour of free interior design consultation for your homebuyers upon close of escrow.

Just give this full-time interior design specialist a call at 626-6296.

■ The best kind of news . . .

Contempo Realty, located at Junipero between Fifth and Sixth in downtown Carmel, was the recipient of this year's Best Overall Decorations in the village.

But there's more to it than that. The agency also has asked visitors, who stop in to view the beautiful decorations, to bring a wrapped and labeled gift for shut-ins of any age. All, of course, in an effort to help make somebody's holiday season a little brighter. If you're interested in helping this worthy cause, give Judie Profeta a call at 622-1040, or stop by with a gift.

■ And the sad news.....

We all mourn the death last week of John Leo, 53. The overflow attendance last Friday at William Smith's office remembering John's life and accomplishments is a testament to how he will be missed.

John served on the board of directors of the Monterey County Association of Realtors and, in 1995, was named outstanding member. He also helped spearhead the formation of REInfoLink, the regional multiple listing service.

Memorial contributions in John's honor may be sent to the Board of Realtors Scholarship Fund, care of Pacific Bay Real Estate Corp. (with whom John was last associated), 659 Abrego St., Suite 1, Monterey 93940.

INMAN: Hey Bill, buy up the state purchase a few plots of land or even a large subdivision.

Instead, buy all of it — every parcel from Eureka to the Mexican border, from the Pacific to the Sierra — every shopping center in Bakersfield, Modesto and El Cajon; every million-dollar home in Beverly Hills, Montecito, Carmel and Hillsborough; every farm in the Central Valley; every industrial building in San Francisco, San Jose, Los Angeles and Long Beach; all of the tilt-up office buildings in north San Diego County and the Silicon Valley and all the business parks in Contra Costa, Riverside and San Bernardino counties; all of the starter homes in Valencia, Tracy and East San Diego County and all of the beach front property and all of the mountains, the fields and the pastures.

Instead, buy all of it — every parcel from Eureka to the Mexican border, from the Pacific to the Sierra — every shopping center in Bakersfield, Modesto and El Cajon; every million-dollar home in Beverly Hills, Montecito, CARMEL and Hillsborough; every farm in the Central Valley; every industrial building in San Francisco, San Jose, Los Angeles and Long Beach. . .

Creative financing

Bill, you could own every square inch of California, but it will take some creative financing.

The assessed valuation of all California property is an estimated $1 trillion. So you can't pull off an all cash deal.

Not to worry.

Go get one of those low down payment mortgages that you hear about on the radio. It is called good old fashioned real estate leverage.

With $25 billion, good credit and no glaring debts, you can get a 2.5 percent low down mortgage. That is about the amount required on a FHA loan, and of course Bill, you are less of a risk than a new home buyer with a new job.

Now the next problem is finding a mortgage lender who can extend you a trillion dollars.

Secondary mortgage market giant Fannie Mae likes to brag about its $1 trillion community home buyers program, so they are apparently equipped. But since the program is aimed at low-income home buyers, this is probably not a good source for you, Bill.

Another option would be the federal or state government. Both might consider issuing a big fat bond measure, considering your purchase would shore up the property tax base and make tax collections much easier since there would only be one property owner. But that would require a vote of the people.

Of course, there would be benefits to the state that the public might consider.

BE A SMART MOVE-UP BUYER

Have your housing needs changed along with your income to the point where you are starting to look for a change in your housing situation?

It is usually easier to find your second home than to find buyers for your first one. As part of your selling strategy, it is a good idea to have your present home under contract before you begin a serious search for a new home. This will make you attractive to sellers in two ways. You won't have to include a contingency in your offer to cover the sale of your present home. And you will look more qualified financially, which will improve your bargaining position if you negotiate on the price or terms. In a situation where there are multiple offers, the chances of your offer being accepted are increased if your offer isn't dependent on selling another house before you can make a move.

GATES: It could be all yours, Bill

For one, there would be a massive jobs hiring program in the home inspection industry in order for you to do due diligence on your acquisitions.

As a single owner of all property, you could do wonders for the environment and complicated land-use planning issues.

You could single-handedly steer development where you wanted. You could make sure the mountains, the open spaces and the beaches are protected from sprawling growth and you could make certain more dense and affordable apartments and homes are built in areas like the Silicon Valley where housing demand is the greatest.

NEXT WEEK: Local Realtor Paul Brocchini's column.

Or you could build nothing so that the value of your holdings soared with no construction to meet the demand. Then when the time is right you could begin to unload a parcel here and there.

Help from renters

By the way, you should count on a monthly mortgage payment of about $8 billion. But don't worry, the rent that the tenants, retailers and businesses pay should help out. Rents on your apartments alone should generate an estimated $350 million a month in gross receipts.

Unfortunately, your mortgage interest deduction will be limited because you can only deduct it on your primary residence. Maybe some smart tax attorney can figure out a way you could make the entire state your home address.

Regardless, you should be able to refinance every six months or so and take out some equity. Predictions of home price inflation rates of 4 or 5 percent this year should allow you to recoup your down payment quickly and still have $20 billion or $30 billion left over. You may want to get in quick, say this January or so, and get out in say 16 to 18 months; that's as long as any boom in California real estate values has ever lasted.

Also, by then you will be sick of being the biggest property owner in the world and you can go back to being just the biggest software maker in the would.

The Jester, enacted by Marguerite Blum, teaches tots to dance in 'The Nutcracker' ballet, staged Dec. 7 and 8 at the Sunset Theater in Carmel.

Dance Kids, Inc. and members of the Carmel Ballet Academy (photos above and below) receive final instructions before the performance of 'The Nutcracker' Sunday at the Sunset Theater in Carmel. Tots of all sizes participated in the lavish production.

CARMEL BALLET ACADEMY, DANCE KIDS, INC. STAGE WINNING 'NUTCRACKER' PERFORMANCES

Social Spotlight

By Dodie Barkley

WHEN I ENTERED the Sunset Theater Sunday afternoon, Dec. 8, it was packed. And I'm sure there were just as many kids in attendance as adults.

Mothers and fathers alike from all parts of the Monterey Peninsula came bearing bouquets for their offspring who were about to perform in "The Nutcracker" ballet.

I must admit I had concerns that all the children in the audience might ruin the performance for me. Well, I have to take my hat off to them. There wasn't a peep audible through the entire ballet.

"The Nutcracker," presented by Dance Kids, Inc., in association with the Carmel Ballet Academy, is not only inspiring, but it is one of the most culturally important events to be presented on the Peninsula — witness the hundreds of kids from ages 3 to 18 who perform in it.

And what performers! Producer Walt DeFaria and director/choreographer Carol Benton moved almost 70 of them through party, snow and fight scenes, which included fast costume changes, with great aplomb.

CHUCK SCARDINA PHOTOS

The costumes and the scenery were fabulous, thanks to a production staff of more than 30.

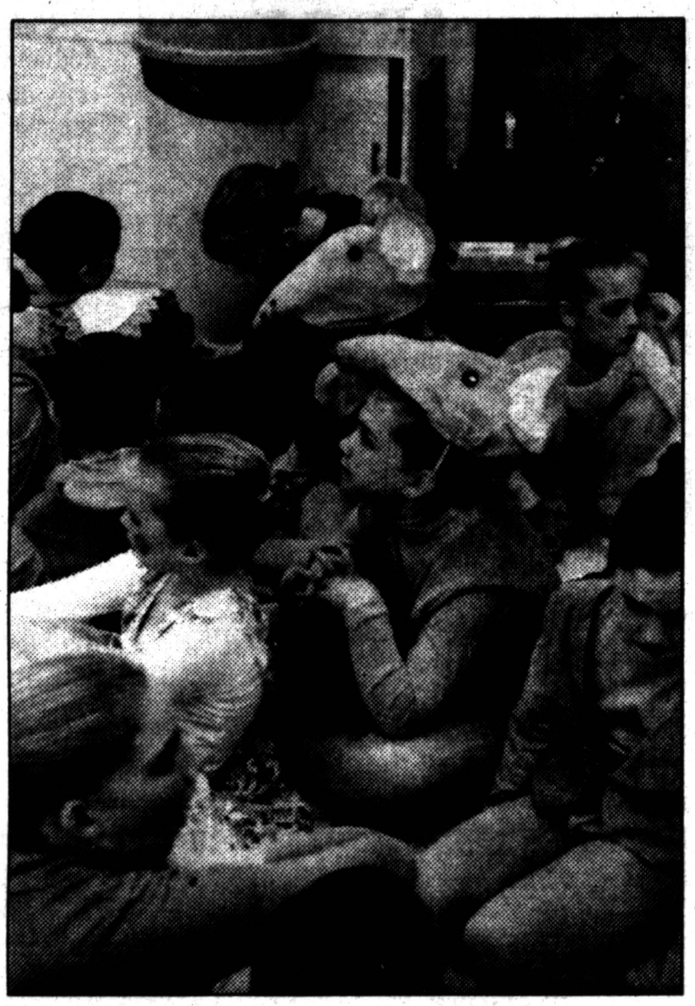
Carmel Ballet Academy student Nancy Newberry, who traveled to Los Angeles and stayed there two weeks to practice the Sugar Plum Fairy ballet with guest artist A. J. Abrams from the Clifton Dance Project of Los Angeles, was as professional as any dancer I've ever seen. Abrams and Newberry brought down the house.

At the finale, the audience burst out with bravos, applause and a standing ovation for the entire ensemble. When Benton came out, she received a huge bouquet of flowers and another standing ovation.

Co-sponsors of the event were KCBA-35 and The Carmel Pine Cone / Monterey Times.

Grants from the Cultural Council for Monterey County and Stahl Motor Company, together with contributions from several other individuals and businesses, are making Dance Kids, Inc., a major youth performing arts organization in Monterey County.

More information about Dance Kids, Inc., can be obtained by calling 624-3729.



Greeting members and guests at the Carmel Woods Neighborhood Association fifth annual Christmas party were association president Richard Warren, Barbara Warren, hostess Karyl Hall, Kay Barber and Fred and Peg Lawson. Hosts Hall and Fred Nelson (below) prepare to welcome guests to their Carmel Woods home.

■ Christmas celebrated festively in Carmel Woods

Driving along Pescadero Road last Thursday night, in a pea soup fog with nary a streetlight, and clusters of huge, dark pine trees, it was difficult to find the location of the Carmel Woods Neighborhood Association's fifth annual Christmas party at the home of Karyl Hall and Fred Nelson.

But lo and behold, as my car headed north around a winding road skirting Pescadero Canyon, it happened! At the next bend, the foggy, blackened night was supplanted by gorgeous, bright Christmas lighting, and outdoor amplifiers echoed the chorus from Handel's "Messiah" at the Nelson and Hall home. Praise be, I found it!

The home featured a festive yard display of tree lights, Santa Claus, elves and an incredible diorama of Christmas scenes that seemed to spread over a half-acre.

The driveway to the actual cottage was already filled with next-door neighbors, walking toward the front door — their arms loaded with trays of goodies.

Among those greeting us at the door were host and hostess Hall and Nelson, with several association officers, including Richard Warren, the founder of the five-year-old organization, his wife Barbara, Peg and Fred Lawson, Hans Lehmann, Kay Barber and Joyce Louis.

Inside the house, every room was decorated in the grand style of the holidays that reminded me of the movie "Holiday Inn." All that was missing near the cheerful fireplace was Bing Crosby at the piano.

Since owning the 65-year-old structure, Nelson and Hall have added a larger bedroom and bathroom. I counted at least three festively decorated fireplaces.

As at most parties in a private setting, the members gathered in the kitchen, to dig into the scrumptious potluck offerings. There were plenty of cookies, desserts and delicious apple cider, too.

Besides conducting meetings every three months and bringing in guest speakers, the members of the Carmel Woods Neighborhood Association sure know how to celebrate Christmas.

For those who wish to have more information about the association, call Richard Warren at 626-1516. Happy Yule!

■ Feast for AIDS draws praise, garners bids at the DoubleTree

I couldn't help but be affected by the event program handed out at the Feast for AIDS held Sunday night at the DoubleTree Hotel in Monterey. It read: "A Sunday Tradition, Sixth Edition, to benefit the Monterey County AIDS Project. Eleven years of caring, the challenge continues."

Caring — that was the overwhelming atmosphere present at this sensational feast! I asked several people why they supported the Monterey County AIDS Project (MCAP).

Co-chair Artie Early told me that many of the valuable, outstanding young people she had worked with — and admired — over the years on the Gourmet Gala were gone. In addition, Early said her co-chair this year, David Beckwith, was a delight to be associated with.

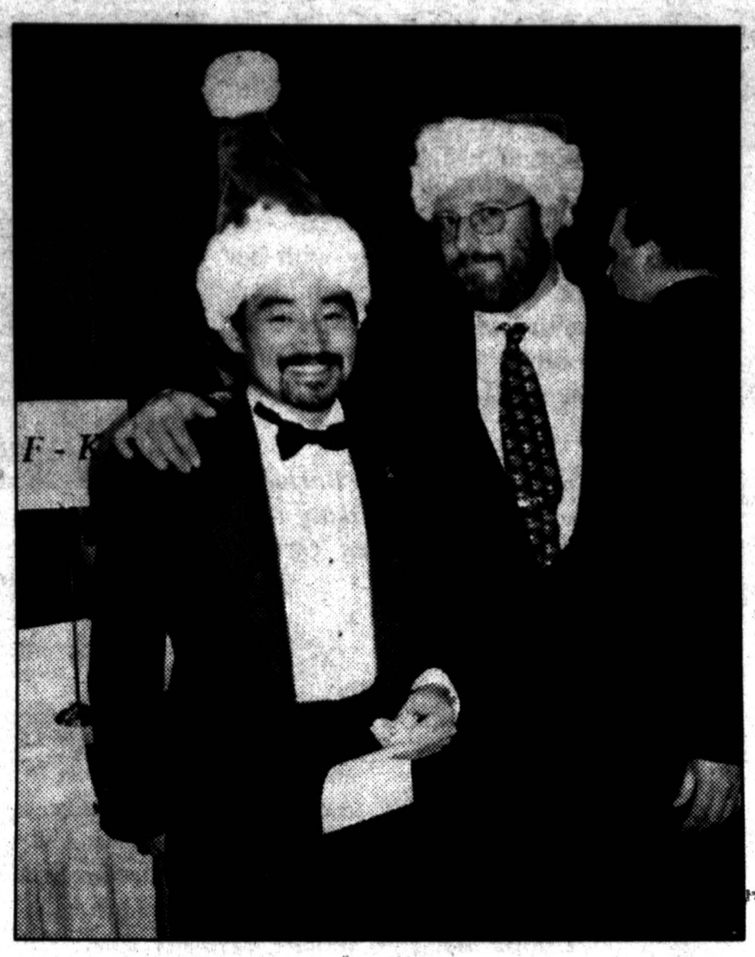
Sharon Blaziek said she and her husband make a monthly pledge to do their part to help find a cure for the devastating disease.

Pat Nickerson and Kathie Erwin, both nurses, said they are sure certain drugs today are working well, but Erwin stated that, in Monterey especially, the number of AIDS cases is on the rise.

After Beckwith welcomed everyone, Lorraine Faherty, president of the MCAP board, started the annual event in a manner that has become tradition. She asked all the people who have been coming to the Feast for one year to stand; then those who have been coming for two years, until she reached the sixth year.

This is always a touching moment, because at the end, most of us are standing.

As for the Feast itself, it was again a delectable affair. Under the direction of chairperson Tracy Gentry, sous chefs Karen Kusher, Margot Malikoff, Juan Ponce, Jerry Alcanter, Aaron Patch, Dorothy Maras, Carl Ashurst, Adam Sohn, Elizabeth Bishop, Wendy Brodie and honorary sous chef Wendy Little, each course was professionally rendered with panache. I have neither seen, nor tasted such delectable cuisine.



Vice President of the Board Wes Kashiwagi and friend James Mearns wear festive hats to the Monterey County Feast for AIDS, which took place at the DoubleTree Hotel Sunday. (Chuck Scardina photos).

For the fifth year, Carl Jaeger, vice president of marketing for Penfolds, an Australian winery, has been donating all the delicious wines that accompany each course.

Throughout the repast, Lee Durley, Scott Brown, Dale Mills and Andry Weis played beautiful music as Laurie Hofer and Peggy Brown sang. Hofer and Brown, in beautifully modulated voices, sang tunes from the movie "Holiday Inn." They ended with "White Christmas," and we all joined in.

At the unusual auction, a significant part of the Feast, attendees had the opportunity to make bids for chef coats of some of the most famous culinary talents around the country.

The list of chefs represented included local stars Bert Cutino of The Sardine Factory and Cal Stamenov of The Highlands Inn. Also donating coats to the auction were David Burke of New York City, Joyce Goldstein of San Francisco and Dean Fearing of Dallas.

A marvelous commemorative coat, specially embroidered for the '96 Feast for AIDS by Connie Colarusso and signed by all the event's contributing chefs, was one-of-a-kind and the rapid bidding proved that fact.

Receiving the chairman's award for outstanding service and help was Grace Ashby. All of the chefs and co-chairman Early received beautiful embroidered chef's coats, with stars signifying the number years they have been involved with the Feast.

If you wish to help the Monterey County AIDS Project, call Bill Lutz at 394-4747.

Setting the record straight

THE EDITING gremlins paid a visit to Dodie Barkley's column last week when two simple letters were added to the beginning of a word in her account of Will Bullas' 10th annual one-man art show at the New Masters Gallery in Carmel.

But those two letters completely changed the meaning of what Dodie was trying to get across. Here's what Dodie initially wrote:

"Some of his (Bullas') other paintings depict famous people in poses that reflect their lifestyles. Especially well-known is Will's portrait of former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood, dressed as a cowboy and seated with his long legs stretching across the top of the mayor's desk."

Enter the gremlins. Everything was printed as written except for the word famous. It came out *in*famous. Different word, different meaning. A glance at Webster's makes that clear.

We heartily apologize to Will Bullas, Jennifer Hill of New Masters Gallery, Clint Eastwood and our Social Spotlight editor, Dodie Barkley. The error, albeit unintentional, painted a much different picture (no pun intended) than was intended. Again, we apologize.

Allen's small sculptures of mice, there was a box of uncut, semi-precious stones, a cage holding an injured squirrel, fossilized trilobites, a Great Dane named Nebuchadnezzar and a convalescing sparrow hawk called Roland.

Marjorie Allen died at 52 in the late '60s. "Tom" and Marion Sawyer have also passed away. They would all have taken pride in their granddaughter's combined accomplishments which now include detailed and realized oil paintings of children, in addition to work in pencil and watercolors.

Missy's paintings are currently shown at New Master's Gallery on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh in Carmel. She and her family are members of the congregation of the First Baptist Church of Carmel Valley. All are involved in church activities and Missy feels that her talent and her family are blessings from God.

She lives in Carmel Valley with her husband Ronn Olson and three children, Golden, a junior and offensive tackle for the Padres football team at Carmel High School, Audie and Lane.

Pacific Grove resident Sue Barton is a freelance writer who is working on a book of essays, tentatively titled 'Of Cats and Men,' in her spare time.

Continuing a musical legacy introduced by her grandfather, Missy Jenkins currently plays the pipes at sunset on Tuesdays at the Inn at Spanish Bay. Her daughter, Audie, plays drums with The Prince Charles Junior Pipe Band.

One of the greatest gifts a parent, a grandparent, an aunt or an uncle can give to little family members is the gift of poetry. If children are not introduced to the music of poetry when they are quite small, they may never grow to love it later in life.

This is a handsome book of poetry, nicely designed and illustrated from photographs of Bandel's own children and grandchildren — a perfect Christmas gift.

The author is in great demand. She has to date staged more than 100 interactive poetry readings nationwide in schools, libraries, bookstores and private homes, and seems no closer to that dreamed-of Carmel retirement. She and her husband still reside in Berkeley "in an empty-nested eight-bedroom house."

Ostrich Sausage and Polenta

Ostrich sausage laced with garlic and herbs is available at the Corralitos market priced at $5.29 per pound. Meat department manager Dave Peterson advises just to microwave the sausage as they are sold fully cooked.

I like the coarse grain polenta best as it is more traditional and cartoonist and polenta cooking expert Eldon Dedini agrees. I buy Bob's Red Mill, the quick cooking polenta, which Eldon's grandmother who taught him how to make it would have frowned upon. Follow the package directions but try substituting chicken or beef stock for plain water. Ilene Tuttle showed how to make a gala polenta dish as follows:

While your polenta is cooking, slice a handful of mushrooms, coarsely chop an onion, a green and red pepper and peel and cube a medium-size eggplant. Sauté all the above in olive oil until wilted but not browned. When polenta is done, spread half of it on the bottom of a casserole, top with half the sauteed veggies, adding a second layer of polenta and remaining vegetables. Dust with grated Parmesan cheese. Cover and keep warm in a 275 degree oven until ready to serve.

'Apron Strings,' written by Carmel resident Deborah Smith, appears twice monthly in Peninsula.
